Soviets Ask Red China For 7 Ports, Reports Say

Moscow Conference Said to Be Snagged On Tough Demands Pressed by Russia

Chinese-Soviet negotiations in Moscow have bogged down over Russian demands for full control of seven key ports in north China, the New York Times reported yesterday morning from Paris.

An account by C. L. Sulzberger names five ports demanded by Russia in addition to Dairen and Port Arthur, already under full Soviet supervision. The five new ports are Chinwangtao, Li Fu-chen (believed to be Haichow), Chefoo, Weihaiwei and Tsingtao.

In addition, Sulzberger reported the USSR has made additional demands from Mao Tze-tung's Communist Peiping government. He described these as:

1. That a Chinese labor force of 500,000 be made available to Russia for an unspecified period.

2. That, in the face of the threat of imminent famine, increased shipments of foodstuffs, especially grain, be provided from Manchuria.

3. That Peiping make far-reaching concessions to "minority" groups in Sinkiang, Inner Mongolia, Manchuria and Tibet, expected soon to be overrun by Mao's Communist forces. Sinkiang is inhabited largely by non-Chinese Moslems closely akin to the Turkestan peoples of Soviet Central Asia.

Counter Demands Made

According to the Times account, Mao and the negotiators who accompanied him to Moscow a month ago have not acceded to these demands. Rather have they countered with demands of their own, which include a flat guarantee from Moscow of financial aid totaling $2,800,000,000 and greatly increased supplies of military equipment, particularly aircraft.

Should the Soviet gain its ends, it would hold absolute control of the Yellow Sea, completely outflanking the United States-supported government of southern Korea. In addition, the northern Chinese provinces of Manchuria and Inner Mongolia would be sealed off from the rest of China.

Indications were that even though the USSR were willing to accede in principle to the Chinese requests, it would have difficulty meeting them on the scale desired. Russia itself looted virtually the entire heavy industry of Manchuria immediately after the war to supply its own deficiencies in capital equipment.

Furthermore, Moscow has been short on freely convertible foreign exchange with which to meet Chinese demands for financial help. Members of the Council for Economic Mutual Assistance have been complaining to Moscow of

Acheson Denies Any Resignation Talk With Truman

By The Associated Press

Secretary of State Dean Acheson last night said he had not discussed with President Truman whether he should resign because of his continued friendship with Alger Hiss.

Acheson's statement that "I do not intend to turn my back on Alger Hiss" touched off demands from a number of Congressmen that Mr. Truman ask him to step out of the Cabinet.

Hiss, convicted of perjury, faces a prison sentence of five years.

In reply to questions about reports he had offered to resign, Acheson last night issued a terse denial. It said:

"Neither the Secretary nor the President has ever raised the question of the Secretary submitting his resignation."

Timing Test May Be Real Thing

TNT Explosions Loosen Sand Beneath 'Mo'; Rehearsal of Big Pull Scheduled Tuesday

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Charge of TNT sends up small geyser of water near stern of "Mighty Mo."

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—The Navy set off blasts beside the grounded battleship Missouri today trying to help free her from the Chesapeake Bay shoal that holds her fast.

Shortly after the explosives—150 pounds of TNT—sent small geysers into the air 50 feet from the ship, Atlantic Fleet spokesmen reported the blasts had accomplished three things:

1. Loosened the sand beneath the 45,000-ton warship.

2. Weakened the powerful suction that holds the Mighty Mo to the bottom.

(3) Added about 75 tons to her buoyancy.

At the same time, spokesmen announced a dress rehearsal for Thursday's scheduled attempt to refloat the Missouri will be held Tuesday at 7:10 a. m. (Eastern standard time). They said there is "a chance" the battleship will be refloated during the rehearsal.

Describing Tuesday's preliminary operation as a "coordination rehearsal" to assure perfect timing, spokesmen said it will employ "full-strength" application of every method arranged for Thursday's try.

These will include full tension on heavy beach gear cables strung from the Missouri to anchors embedded in the bay bottom; "surging tactics by a fleet of tugs, and the lifting power of six submarine salvage pontoons rigged beneath the ship's stern.

Trucks Lined Up Again

Reds Renew Berlin Slowdown After Day of Relaxing It

Berlin, Jan. 29 (AP).—The Russians got generous, then tough with Berlin-bound truck traffic at Helmstedt today.

For nearly 20 hours they let trucks through the British border point at a rate of about 10 an hour—a 100-percent speedup compared with some periods of the eight-day slowdown, but still only about a third of normal.

Then tonight, when the waiting line of trucks had been reduced from about 225 to 35, they suddenly reimposed the old five-an-hour schedule. Guards resumed their meticulous checking of cargoes and shipping papers.

The British zone newspaper, Die Welt, reported from Luebeck that the Russians intended to restore traffic to normal this week.

If this turns out to be true, an American official in Berlin said, it may be because the Russians wish to avoid reprisals from the Western powers in the form of economic sanctions against the Eastern zone.

East German Communists started a series of Soviet sector border rallies in an effort to steam up support for their regime. Gerhart Eisler, East German government information chief, addressed the first rally on the French sector border yesterday and told a crowd of several thousand, "You must pound into the ears of the occupation powers: 'Go home.'"

Reds Reported Massing for Hainan Blow

Conquest Impossible Without Soviet Help, Chiang General Says

Taipei, Formosa, Jan. 29 (AP).—An official Nationalist source reported today that the Chinese Reds have massed more than 5000 motor-powered junks and other small craft for an invasion of Hainan Island.

The vessels are intended to transport 100,000 to 200,000 Red regulars to the big Nationalist island 10 miles off China's south coast, said Gen. Hsia Yu-tsai, director of the Taipei office of the Hainan defense command.

Nevertheless, he asserted in an interview the Communists never would be able to conquer Hainan unless they got active Russian help.

To meet the Red onslaught, the Nationalists have on Hainan 100,000 regulars plus 90,000 militiamen, said Hsia.

He reported the Hainan command had surrounded about 15,000 pro-Red guerillas in the five-finger mountain area of northwestern Hainan. As a result, the possibility of an inside job against Hainan no longer threatens, he said.

The air force, meanwhile, reported continuing raids along the South China coast, sinking an unspecified number of Red junks.

China Reds Call U. S. Envoy a Spy

San Francisco, Jan. 29 (AP).—The American Vice Consul in China's wild west was accused by the Communists today of being a "spy" who sought to organize the bandits of the Sinkiang wilderness.

This latest in a long series of Red propaganda attacks on U. S. diplomats charged that Douglas S. Mackiernan "has been exposed as an espionage agent."

(In Washington, State Department officials called the Red report the "usual fantastic yarn.")

United Drive Is Launched Against Reds

60 U. S. Groups Plan Units in Every Town To Fight Communism

New York, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Representative of 60 national organizations agreed today to unify and launch a combined attack on communism in America.

The resolution was adopted by delegates of the American Legion-sponsored "All-American" conference after they heard Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), speak in favor of a grass roots campaign to combat communism through anti-Communist committees in every American town.

The delegates, representing some 70 million Americans, authorized National Legion Commander George N. Craig to appoint a 17-member committee to build the framework for a permanent organization and to fix a place for another conference meeting within 90 days.

The representatives of religion, fraternal, social and professional organizations agreed that "communism as practiced in the United States is not an economic or political philosophy, but it is in fact a deliberate revolutionary conspiracy."

Accordingly the delegates empowered Craig to set up the committee to plan a permanent anti-Communist front with the following aims:

1. "To formulate plans to stimulate and coordinate the efforts of the organizations here represented and others of like mind.

2. "To encourage and enlist active public interest in combating the infiltration, influence and activities of the Communists and all other subversive elements, and

3. "To act as a clearing house and information center through which the various organizations may be informed and advised of the activities and experiences of other organizations."

The resolution called communism "the greatest present threat

Quakes Kill 1500, Hurt Thousands More in Iran

Tehran, Iran, Jan. 29 (AP).—More than 1500 persons have been killed, thousands more injured and about 20 villages destroyed in a series of earthquakes in the area of Bushire, Persian Gulf port, according to information received here today.

The reports, delayed by breaks in communication lines to Bushire, said the quakes had occurred since Wednesday.

Heavy snows and cold weather were said to have made the situation worse in the stricken area.

Day-Long Survey Trip Shows Prince Georges School Needs

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Along every highway and side street were signs of new construction, brown earth smoothed down by bulldozers and rows of ramblers and apartment developments half-completed.

The three members of the Prince Georges County Board of Education surveyed the new dwelling units in terms of how soon they will be completed and how many children will they be apt to house.

Board members, faced with providing schooling for the mushroom population, yesterday crisscrossed back and forth across the county studying its growth and looking at schools recently completed and still under construction.

At the end of the six-hour tour they expressed approval of the kind of schools they were building but admitted that they were too few to meet the county's pressing needs.

What they saw were functional schools of cinder block, glass and brick in which every cent of available money has been turned into classroom space.

Mrs. Kathryn Reidy, principal of the Ager Road Elementary School, told board members that when the four-room addition to her school is occupied the middle of next

Local Sugar Bowl Game

Policeman Nabs Alcatraz Alumnus in Cafe Fight

Police Pvt. Charles A. Scott had a few busy minutes on his way to work yesterday morning.

He stepped between two men in a fight, disarmed one who was prepared to clout another with the jagged fragments of a sugar bowl, and came up with a former Alcatraz inmate, armed with a .45-caliber automatic and a record of 33 prior arrests.

Scott told superiors he entered a restaurant at 1555 Pennsylvania ave. se., for breakfast at 6:30 a. m. Two men began to argue.

One picked up a glass sugar bowl and clouted the other over the head with it twice, Scott said, breaking the bowl. Then he tried to cut the other with a fragment.

Scott seized the glass-wielder and the glass fragment. Then he said, the man shouted:

"That man has been holding me up all night! He's got a gun"

Scott said the second man then reached for his belt. Scott released the first man, grabbed the second, and found the .45.

Meantime, the first man fled from the place, jumped into a cab, and disappeared.

The gun-carrier, Scott said, was identified as Elzear J. Howder, 44, of no fixed address. He admitted being sentenced here in 1932 to 15 years on nine counts of robbery. He said he served time until 1941, part of it in Alcatraz.

He denied any holdup of the man who disappeared.

Police said his record shows arrests here on charges including robbery, carrying concealed weapons, and being a fugitive from justice.

Scott once received a silver medal for pursuing and disarming an armed man, and has been commended for other captures in murders and other cases.

Counsel Asks Full Inquiry Into Gaming

Crime Subcommittee To Get Fischbach's Recommendation at House Meeting Today

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

Hyman Fischbach, chief counsel for a special District subcommittee of the House investigating crime here, today will recommend a full-dress inquiry into gambling here, The Washington Post learned last night.

The recommendation will come at a closed subcommittee meeting this afternoon and will urge that the inquiring group go all-out to determine if the Washington gambling situation is linked directly with the general crime picture.

Four of the committee members yesterday expressed themselves as favoring the gambling investigation as part of their general probe of crime conditions.

Repeats Previous Statement

Both Fischbach and Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), chairman, were completely noncommittal about contents of the chief counsel's report. But Davis repeated a previous statement:

"The way crimes stemming from gambling have erupted to the surface recently indicates the need for clamping down on lawbreakers in this area."

Then he added:

"You can draw any conclusions you like from that statement."

Representative Sid Simpson (R., Ill.), a members of the subcommittee, said:

"This gambling and other fields of crime certainly seem to overlap. There are these indications of jury tampering in a gambling trial. It would seem from what little I know thus far, that United State Attorney (George Morris) Fay's office is badly overloaded and so is the United States Marshal's office."

[Last Thursday, a District Court jury convicted William (Snags) Lewis, Attilio Acalotti, and Frank Billeci of operating a numbers lottery. In court, before the jury brought in its "guilty" verdict, Judge Alexander Holtzoff said he had information three women jurors were threatened, and one offered a $300 bribe in an attempt to free the defendants.

[Subsequently, it was disclosed, the FBI obtained evidence of five separate attempts to "fix" jurors in the case.]

"Needs Looking Into"

Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.), another member who lives in Alexandria and is familiar with District conditions said: "Certainly the whole situation, not just any one or few parts, needs looking into. I am inclined to go along."

Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.), a member, was still in the hospital yesterday. His illness caused postponement of a subcommittee meeting Saturday. Judge Davis said he will proceed with the meeting today although he regrets the probable absence of Representative Wadsworth.

Another indication the gambling investigation will be given a green light was disclosed last night that a smaller fund than originally contemplated will be necessary to complete it.

Judge Davis, when first questioned, said $100,000 probably would be necessary in addition to the $10,000 already given the subcommittee for the over-all crime inquiry. The Washington Post learned last night the committee

Liquor, Dope Taken in Raid; 26 Arrested

Crime Investigators Accompany Police In Early Morning

Police raided an alleged after-hours drinking place early yesterday, seized 26 persons and confiscated a quantity of whisky and narcotics.

Accompanying the raiders were representatives of the special House subcommittee investigating crime in the District of Columbia. The Washington Post learned. The representatives were Hyman I. Fischbach, counsel for the subcommittee, and John Woog, investigator. No members of Congress were present.

Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, said his men entered a basement at 903 O st. nw. about 1 a. m. after an undercover man had made buys of whisky with marked money.

Robert James Arnold, 33, said by Blick to be the owner, and Wilton Allen, 26, whom he identified as manager, were charged with keeping and selling whisky without a license. Twenty-four other men and women were charged with disorderly conduct and permitted to forfeit $5 collateral each.

Blick said his men also found 34 capsules of heroin and 11 sticks of marihuana atop a mirror. They called in narcotic squad detectives.

As result, Arnold and Allen

Face It, Men! You'll Be Wearing Colorful Clothes This Spring

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Colors, gentlemen, bright colors.

Down with the drab grays and browns. Banish the lint-revealing dark blues. Color, gentlemen, is the revolution and the miracle of spring, 1950, in men's clothes.

You may doubt it, but not the wholesale salesmen of men's wear. Eighty companies strong and under the banner of the Washington-Maryland Men's Apparel Club, they've taken over three floors of the Willard Hotel. Yesterday through Tuesday they are showing their spring lines to their Washington area retailers.

And it's colors. In gloves, in socks, in shirts, in belts, suspenders, pajamas—verily, even underwear.

But, significantly enough, not in the tie line.

"Sure, it's colors," said a textile mill representative. "Men are tired of going around in dull browns and grays.

"We're giving them color—what I call high colors," he added, displaying a pair of gabardine slacks in an eye-catching brown hue.

"It's the women," opined a purveyor of raincoats. "They've shamed the men into it. This year we are showing a chocolate-brown

Deficit Less Than Estimate Seen Possible

2 Senators Hit Pace's View Balanced-Budget Hope Is Unreasonable

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

Budget Director Frank Pace predicted last night that the Federal deficit for the 1951 fiscal year may run below the $5,100,000,000 anticipated by President Truman when he sent his annual budget message to Congress on January 3.

Pace said that the estimates of revenues for the fiscal year opening July 1 were based on the level the national economy had reached after the unexcepted business downturn last spring. He described as "unlikely" suggestions that the estimates might prove to be too optimistic, asserting instead that it is possible tax collections may exceed expectations.

In a radio broadcast, Pace said it is "unreasonable to expect an immediate balancing of the budget under present conditions." He explained that we are "paying for a very expensive war" and are in the middle of a costly cold war.

Two economy-minded senators, in broadcasts in their home states, differed with the budget director's stand. Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) said that the budget should be balanced in prosperous times and advocated adoption of his proposal for a constitutional amendment which would require Congress to live within its income each year.

Under the Tydings plan, the President would provide an estimate of revenues for each new year and Congress would be barred

Top Adviser Sees Early Move Unless Men Return

'Crucial Time' Near, Spokesman Says; Field Reports Show Holdouts Adamant

By The Associated Press

A top White House official last night said President Truman might intervene in the coal situation "within 48 hours" unless there is a substantial back-to-work movement by miners today.

Reports from the field indicated there would not be any such mass move to return to the pits.

Nearly one-fourth of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers who dig soft coal have been on an unauthorized strike for three weeks, and most of them indicated they intended to continue today.

The top adviser to Mr. Truman, who specified that he could not be quoted by name, said the Chief Executive may take some action shortly — possibly today — unless there is a back-to-work movement.

2 Points for Decision

The President, this informant said, will decide at the same time whether to:

1. Invoke emergency powers of the Taft-Hartley Act.

2. Set up a fact-finding board independent of the Taft-Hartley Act, with a request that such a board make recommendations for the settlement of differences between the mine workers and the soft coal industry.

The spokesman said the "crucial time" has about arived for Presidential intervention. Mr. Truman has repeatedly told news conferences that he will make the decision on whether there is a national emergency.

Under Congress' Pressure

Mr. Truman declined comment at his news conference on Friday, when he was asked whether he was about to take some action. He has been under pressure from members of Congress to act in an effort to restore full production.

Northern and Western operators last week offered to resume contract talks with Lewis, and the UMW chieftain promptly accepted. Negotiations are scheduled to begin here on Wednesday.

Although Mr. Truman wants the Taft-Hartley Act repealed, he has said repeatedly he would not hesitate to use its emergency provisions if he thought the cool production slowdown constituted a national emergency.

The adviser who predicted early action unless the miners return to work said there is some difference of opinion in top Administration circles over whether to use the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Taft-Hartley Act empowers

Dixie Senators Hope To Balk FEPC 'Gag'

U. S. Survey Shows

3 of 4 Small Speculators In Grain Lose

By The Associated Press

Three out of four small speculators in grain markets lost money among 8782 covered in a Government study announced yesterday.

The total losses of the group in a nine-year period from 1924 to 1932 was nearly 12 million dollars, or nearly six times their total profits.

The analysis, made by the Commodity Exchange Authority, said most small traders lost because of a tendency to close out their profit positions rather quickly but to let losses run.

On loss positions, they hesitated until accumulated losses wiped out profits on the more successful trades.

Only 21.2 percent of farmers made profits on their trading operations and 21.8 percent of clergymen.

But no class or group of small traders showed more profit-takers than losers. Topping the profit list were managers of grain businesses with a profit average of only 29.1 percent.

The study confirmed the commonly held impression that the amateur speculator is more likely to be on the "long" than the "short" side in the futures market. Those on the long side speculate that prices will advance, while those on the short side stake their money on the belief that prices will go down.

By the United Press

Southern Senators were said yesterday to be "fairly confident" of stopping the Administration drive to impose a debate "gag" when the Fair Employment Practices Commission bill reaches the Senate floor.

They were said to feel that while the Truman forces will muster more than 50 Senators on the critical tests, they will fall short of the number to block a Dixie filibuster. Under a new rule passed last year, 64 Senators must vote to limit debate.

Administration leaders never have been optimistic over the outcome, but they are bound to make the effort if only to provide a record for Northern Democratic candidates in next fall's elections.

If the Southerners are correct in their analysis, FEPC may come up in the House first. The House measure is locked in the Rules Committee, but it is considered only a matter of time until it reaches the floor one way or another.

Most Bitterly Opposed

Senate Administration leaders have tentatively scheduled FEPC debate for mid-February. The bill, which would create a commission to enforce a ban against racial and religious discrimination in hiring, if the most bitterly opposed of all President Truman's civil-rights proposals.

The key vote will come after two or three weeks of debate on a motion to limit discussion. The cloture rule adopted last session requires a constitutional two-thirds—64 Senators—before debate can be gagged, regardless of how many Senators are on the floor.

Feel Sure of Only About 25

The Southerners, however, feel sure of only about 25 votes against cloture. This includes 19 of the 22 Senators from the 11 States in "Old South," plus a few outside Democrats and a handful of Republicans. To be certain of victory, they must recruit about eight more Senators who either will vote against cloture or be conveniently absent at the time.

In the House, civil rights backers are trying desperately to bring FEPC to the floor either through a discharge petition or another new rule, which permits the chairman of a legislative committee to bypass the Rules Committee after it has held a bill 21 days.

Critics of the measure concede, however, it eventually will reach the floor and that it probably will pass the House.

Members or representatives have been with Metropolitan police on raids, recently, one as late as Saturday night, to obtain first-hand views of the problems they face. Intensive studies of recent crimes, of gambling trials, and of the District and Federal penal codes have been undertaken together with a preliminary survey of law enforcement agencies.

Senator Edward Martin, (R., Pa.) said the Government should be building up a surplus to pay off the national debt. Instead, he said, the nation is gong 5 to 5½ billion dollars in debt each year. Senator Martin suggested the posibility of a two-year Congressional moratorium on new Government spending.

In his budget discussion, Page said that of the President's $42,500,000,000 budget for the 1951 fiscal year, 71 percent will go to pay the costs of past wars and "to try to achieve a peaceful world." These expenditures are for national defense, international programs, veterans' programs and interest on the public debt, he said.

The cost of Federal Government during the next fiscal year will amount to $278 for each man, woman and child in the United States, according to Pace. In 1939, Federal expenditures amounted to $69 per capita.

The increase, Pace said, shows "what a vastly different world we live in now." Just as the number of veterans has jumped from four million in 1939 to 19 million today so have veterans' services and benefits risen, he said. The national debt, boosted by wartime borrowing, is six times its 1939 size, which means that interest payments are roughly six times what they were before the war, he said.

The national defense program, which cost $8 per capita in 1939, will cost "each of us" $89 in 1951, Pace asserted. He estimated that 80 percent of the increases in Government costs in the last 12 years goes to pay the cost of past wars and to prevent future conflicts.

raincoat and one in the Air Force blue."

In the sock field, it appears to be pastels.

"We've also got a line of socks for summer," said a sock company representative. "In summer you have tropical shirts, tropical suits—why not tropical socks?"

In the glove line, one company boasted of more varied shades than they've had since before the war.

"Time was," a spokesman said, "in the days of Cardinal Richelieu when a man had 400, 500 pairs of gloves. Today some characters don't even have two pairs.

"Look," he continued, "you see a man in a nice topcoat. A hat. But without his gloves, he doesn't look dressed. I don't feel dressed unless I'm wearing gloves."

Showing a line of wildly Western-type belts for youngsters, a dealer in leather goods explained television has set the trend.

"All those Western movies—cowboys—have given the kids the idea," he reported.

Men are also going to wear cowboy-inspired waistwear for sports.

In the shirt line, the more conservative patterns of pastel shades were reported for winter and autumn; brighter, "less conservative" shades for spring.

One pair of pajamas, listed as a "hot item," was jet black with a deep red collar and a nonpolitical Chinese dragon on the shirt. There was underwear printed like a leopard skin.

But the ties, said one cravat salesman, are becoming more conservative.

'Stripes will be big," he said. No more of that painted splash here, splash there. Patterns are smaller—they don't stand out.

Progressive Party To Convene Feb. 24

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—The second national convention of the Progressive Party will be held in Chicago February 24-26.

Chairman Elmer A. Benson and Secretary C. B. Baldwin said today the main purpose of the convention will be to "adopt a program and plan of organization to insure the full and effective participation of our party in the 1950 congressional elections."

New Invention Tests Aircraft Not Yet Built

By C. B. Allen
NYHT News Service

The Navy announced yesterday that engineers at Massachusetts Institute of Technology have developed and are operating for it an intricate electronic and mechanical "flight simulator" which "flight tests" new high-speed aircraft and guided missiles before they have been constructed.

Navy Bureau of Ordnance engineers added that the new machine has now been in "limited use" for nearly a year and already has disclosed aircraft design flaws that "undoubtedly would have cost the lives of several test pilots" under old methods of building and testing planes. They said the MIT combination calculator-robot pilot promises to cut the future number of required field tests for aircraft, guided missiles and rockets "from 90 to 95 percent."

The machine has been under development and construction for nearly three years and is said to have cost more than one million dollars. But, as a Navy spokesman pointed out, "one prototype model of a new-type aircraft frequently costs one million dollars or more—and we figure the MIT calcultaor already has save a few prototypes."

Essentially, the new calculator is a mechanical-brain type device with a few additions, which is able to foretell with uncanny accuracy the performance of nonexistent aircraft and missile components after data have been fed into the machine. Such data are obtained from wind tunnel tests of highly accurate scale models of the projected aircraft or missile or from similar dependable sources.

A problem is set up in the calculator-pilot by means of electronic computer dials representing the vital characteristics of the vehicle to be "test flown." When everything is ready the simulator starts whirring on push-button signals from a master control board and the answers are ground out on a recording chart in a matter of seconds.

"This computer," the Navy announcement said, "adds, multiplies,, integrates and subtracts at almost unbelievable speed. For example, a computation which would take an able operator 100 hours to carry out by hand is handled by the computer in 10 seconds and much more elaborate problems can be handled in a matter of minutes."

Murray Sends 500 On 'Holy Crusade' For Civil Rights

Pittsburgh, Jan. 29 (AP).—CIO and United Steelworker President Phillip Murray today sent more than 500 steelworker officials on what he termed a "holy crusade" to fight for civil rights.

He urged them to support President Truman's civil rights program in every way possible. He said of Mr. Truman:

"Not since Lincoln has a president gone to bat for a people as has Mr. Truman. He has put his head on the political block and his party has been torn asunder by the issue."

Murray spoke at a USW-CIO civil rights conference here. The meeting launched a series of cross-country meetings the steel union hopes will end in enactment of national civil rights.

pital today he said, and the little girl possibly will be operated on during the day. Her chances for survival Dr. Hottel said, are "very slight."

According to Mrs. Davis, the little blonde girl appeared to be in good health until last Monday. She was taken to the hospital Tuesday and doctors said she was suffering from a brain tumor causing progressive paralysis. They advised an immediate operation.

Mrs. Davis, learning from her brother of Margaret Ann's condition, made arrangements with her physician, Dr. Hottel, to handle the case.

The Air Force plane, braving weather that grounded commercial airliners, took off from Tampa's MacDill Air Force Base at 2 a. m. Sunday. Its destination was Patuxent River Naval Station, Md., or Andrews Air Force Base.

The plane, a C-47, found both fields closed in by heavy weather.

After circling over Washington for some time, the pilot, Capt. E. I. Armagost of MacDill Air Force Base, decided to go in at National Airport despite a thick fog that gave only a 200-foot ceiling.

The plane was "talked down" to a perfect landing by the airport's ground control approach (radar blind-landing) system.

Besides Armagost, the crew included Maj. W. E. Burrill, copilot; Flight Nurse First Lieut. Eleanor Jones, and Navy doctor, Lieut. (j. g.) M. A. Kellet. Also aboard was Margaret Ann's father, who had to return with the plane a short time later.

Dr. Hottel and two prominent neurosurgeons, Dr. Walter Freeman, president of the District Medical Society, and Dr. Arthur Morris, past president of the American Neurological Society, began an immediate study of the case.

Lindstrom Hints Suit To Divorce Ingrid

Los Angeles, Jan. 29 (AP).—Dr. Peter Lindstrom, Ingrid Bergman's husband, "implied" through a spokesman today that he would file suit for divorce in California regardless of the outcome of her suit in Mexico.

A statement issued by John Vernon, Lindstrom's personal representative, said the actress' husband "has no intention of appearing in the Mexico proceedings but will leave all issues to the California courts."

Miss Bergman filed suit last week in Mexico. She reportedly intends to marry Roberto Rossellini, director for whom she recently made a picture on the island of Stromboli, Italy.

Foes of Cotton Bill Expected To Drop Fight

By the United Press

Northern Democrats yesterday indicated they will drop their delaying action against the South's new cotton bill because they realize their tactics cannot affect the outcome of the civil rights fight.

The foldup of their campaign of harrassment presumably would clear the way for final passage of the bill Tuesday. House leaders hope to finish amending it today, but have promised week-ending Congressmen no roll calls will be taken then.

Since critics of the cotton measure want a record vote, final passage would automatically be delayed another day. The bill, intended to correct "inequities" in the 1950 quota law, would increase planting by about 1,400,000 acres.

Meantime, the Agriculture Department estimated cotton growers will receive at least 750 million dollars from the Government this year, either as price support payments or for export cotton purchased under the Marshall European aid plan.

It said growers are expected to let the department take over an estimated 2,200,000 bales under the price support program at a cost of 300 million dollars. In addition, the Economic Cooperation Administration is expected to lay out 450 million dollars for four million bales of export cotton.

Action on the cotton bill bogged down completely Friday when a group of Northern Democrats and butter bloc Congressmen, who are disgruntled over Southern support of the Federal oleo tax repealer, joined camps to force a series of time-consuming quorum calls.

Spaak Turned Down As Economy Unifier

Paris, Jan. 29 (AP).—European leaders have turned down President Truman's plan to put Paul-Henri Spaak, former Belgian Premier, in charge of unifying western European economy, it was learned authoritatively tonight.

Despite British denials, it is believed here that British opposition particularly killed Spaak's chances to be chairman of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation (OEEC), the European group which administers Marshall aid under the European recovery plan.

Sir Stafford Cripps, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, was reported to have opposed creating such a chairmanship or naming Spaak to it. Mr. Truman's indorsement appeared to stiffen the opposition.

Creation of the post had been suggested at a meeting of the OEEC "consultative group" of Cabinet Ministers from eight countries in the organization. Spaak said in Washington January 18, after a conference with Mr. Truman, that the President had urged him to take the post. Secretary of State Dean Acheson repeated the urging a day later.

Most European leaders were astonished and many were resentful, informants said. The OEEC groups the 18 areas receiving American aid but the United States is not a member.

Basis of opposition to Spaak is said to be based on his business practices in Belgium and is not personal.

Under his leadership, Belgium became Europe's classic example of postwar recovery by dropping controls and giving business a virtually free hand. The British and the Scandinavians believe in controls. They fear his practices would influence their countries.

They point out that last spring, at the end of Spaak's term as premier, Belgian unemployment was well over 200,000 in a population of 8,500,000.

Aides of Marshall Plan Administrator Paul Hoffman said he still wanted an OEEC chairman to strengthen the organization so it can abolish European trade barriers and unify economy in a drive toward financial stability by June, 1952, when American aid is scheduled to end.

Belgians Buy Back Fund Francs

The Belgian government has repurchased slightly more than 1 billion francs from the International Monetary Fund, paying $12,100,000 and gold valued at 8½ million United States dollars.

As result of the repurchase, Fund officials anounced yesterday, Belgian currency held by the Fund has been reduced to the level that preceded purchases of dollars by Belgium.

In December, 1947, and early in 1948 Belgium purchased a total of 33 million dollars from the Fund in exchange for Belgium francs.

Subsequently, during the financial year 1948-1949, Belgium experienced a large increase in its monetary reserves. Under the Articles of Agreement of the Fund, Belgium was obliged to use a part of this increase in reserves to reduce the Fund's holdings of Belgian francs.

the President, when he finds that a national emergency exists, to order that production be continued for a period of 80 days while a fact-finding board investigates the dispute. The board has no authority to recommend a settlement.

Saw No Emergency

Mr. Truman has said he has not acted because no emergency exists. Dr. James Boyd, director of the Bureau of Mines, told a Senate committee last Wednesday that such an emergency is here or will be shortly.

Some White House advisers, one of them said last night, want the President to follow the same procedure he used in last year's steel strike, setting up an independent board with instructions to make recommendations back to him.

This would involve a request to both the mine workers and the industry to resume production of coal pending hearings by the board.

Owner Vents Disgust At Automobile 'Lemon'

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—Sam DeStefano doesn't like his new automobile and, what's more, he doesn't care who knows it.

He decked the shiny vehicle with grapefruit, and hung signs on it proclaiming "this is a lemon."

A police officer, distressed at such unusual goings on, hauled Sam in. But a search of the law books showed the demonstration violated no ordinances. Sam was allowed to continue on his way, grapefruit and all.

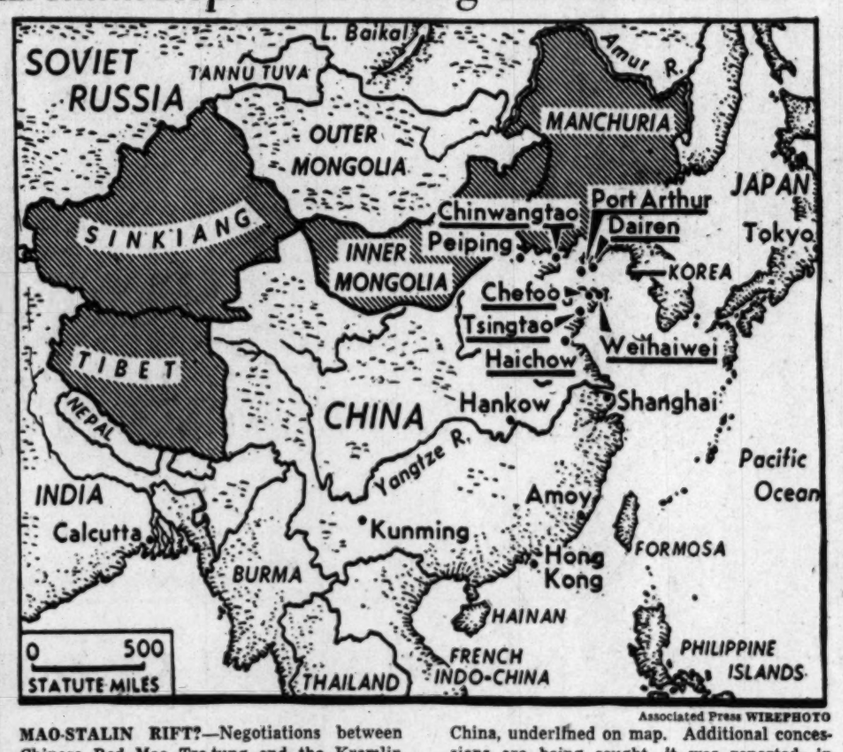
Kremlin Reported Seeking Chinese Ports . . .



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MAO-STALIN RIFT?—Negotiations between Chinese Red Mao Tze-tung and the Kremlin are reported bogged down over Soviet demands for full control of seven key ports in north China, underlined on map. Additional concessions are being sought, it was reported, in Sinkiang, Inner Mongolia, Manchuria and Tibet (shaded) shortages of curency for international trading.

Russia Reported Asking Red China for 7 Ports

These difficulties, Sulzberger reported, are not expected to affect the tenor of the communique announcing "complete success" when the negotiations ultimately are completed. The tone of the communique is fully expected to be optimistic even though it is not now expected that complete accord will be reached on all the points of differences between the principals.

As it is, Sulzberger remarked, the negotiations have been "more awkward and protracted than had been foreseen by the Kremlin." One result has been the summoning to Moscow of a "second wave" of Peiping delegates, headed by Foreign Minister Chou En-lai. The wide publicity given to Chou's first meeting with Premier Stalin, at which Mao was not believed to have been present, has led to the belief that Mao proved too stubborn a negotiator. There also have been private reports that Mao has sought to disassociate himself from signing codicils to a Sino-Soviet treaty which he regards as unfavorable to China. Other reports have circulated that Mao has fallen seriously ill.

Purge Hints Seen

The two principal leaders of the new Peiping government in addition to Mao and Chou were identified by Sulzberger as:

Nieh Jung-chen, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Chinese Communist Party and former commander of the Shansi Chahar-Hopeh Military District. He was educated in France, Belgium and Russia and speaks French and Russian fluently. Li Fu-chen, vice chairman of the Northeast Peoples Government and one of the founders of the so-called "French branch" of the Chinese Communist Party.

Sluzberger reported "some suspicion" in Paris that the presence in Moscow of these four personalities indicates the Kremlin's desire to remove the most independently minded leaders from China at this time. This, it was reasoned, affords more opportunity for a pro-Soviet faction headed by Liu Shao-chi to consolidate its political position while attention is focused on Moscow. Liu is deputy chairman of the Chinese Politburo and studied in Moscow. He has been a member of the Communist Party since 1922.

Tough Russian Terms For China Reported

By The Associated Press

Diplomatic authorities here reported yesterday they are receiving a steady stream of rumors and reports about exhorbitant demands by Russia on Chinese Communist rulers now in Moscow.

State Department officials said reports which have reached them appear to be generally in line with Secretary Acheson's charge that the Russians are detaching important areas of northern China and adding them to the Soviet Union.

Reports have been reaching here also that the Russians are moving large missions into the Chinese Communist capital of Peiping.

Most top American officials feel one of the real conflicts between the Chinese and Russian leaders in Moscow is over control of the machinery of government in China and the people who run it.

One point on which American officials do seem certain is that the Chinese and Russian leaders will suppress whatever agreements they make on special concessions for the Soviet Union in China. Their announcement of new Sino-Soviet pacts, which is expected soon, is expected to deal primarily with expressions of friendship and agreement between the two greatest Communist nations.

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, yesterday accused Russia of "political and economic penetration" into Sinkiang and Inner Mongolia.

Connally sided with Acheson's view that the Soviets are grabbing off parts of north China.

"Already the Chinese authority has been excluded from Outer Mongolia," Connally said. "And already the Soviet tentacles have reached relentlessly into Sinkiang and Inner Mongolia where the process of political and economic penetration is well under way. Only the blind can fail to see their true intentions."

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) told reporters he is convinced the Communist Chinese leader Mao Tze-tung has been in Moscow trading economic rights in Mongolia for a free hand in pushing his armies into southeast Asia.

He said there is danger the Chinese Communists will use the large Chinese populations in Burma, Indo-China, the Malay States and the Philippines as a sort of fifth column.

Greece Needs No Loans From U. S., Official Says

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Greece needs no loans from the United States, its finance minister said today in explaining that the Marshall aid program "is fulfilling all the needs of our country."

George Mantzavinos made the statement as he left by plane for London after a visit in this country. He met with Government finance officials and private banking representatives.

Six months ago, the minister said, inflationary Greek prices started to stabilize.

Prices now are beginning to decline, he added, and inflation has been virtually stopped.

Bidault Puts Budget Stand To Vote Test

Paris, Jan. 29 (U.P.). — Premier Georges Bidault asked the National Assembly tonight for five votes of confidence in a move to prevent his government's 1950 budget from being chopped down by the upper house of Parliament.

Bidault asked four of the votes on items that the Council of the Republic had knocked out of his budget or watered down drastically. The fifth vote would be on the budget as a whole.

Bidault, who recently won six confidence votes, made his request at the end of a lengtny debate on the second reading of the budget. The upper house last week refused to pass the government's budget and its slashed version came back for final reading in the Assembly.

Voting was expected to take place shortly after midnight, since a full day is required to elapse between a request for a confidence vote and the actual vote.

The confidence votes would constitute the Assembly's overriding of the action of the Council of the Republic. The Assembly is the principal French legislative body.

Ages 50 to 80 Accepted For Life Insurance

Policy Builds Cash-Loan Values

An excellent policy to provide funds for your dependents or help pay expenses of your last illness or burial is now written for men and women of ages 50 to 80 by a legal reserve company. Non-assessable.

Benefits are not cut and rates do not go up as you grow older. It is a Whole-Life policy with increasing Benefits for Natural death. Does not terminate at age 80. Convenient monthly premium payment plan.

You incur no obligation in sending for "Free Life Insurance Information—Ages 50 to 80." No salesman will call. Address your letter or penny postal (state your age) to Old American Insurance Company, Kansas City 6, Mo. Dept. L-4962.

Wiretapping Pros and Cons Argued on Air

Charges that FBI wiretapping is illegal and corrupting to the tappers and a defense of the procedure as an instrument of security were aired here last night.

Debatting the issue on radio station WWDC's "District Roundtable" were Clifford Durr, president of the National Lawyers' Guild; Joseph Rauh, chairman of the Washington chapter of the Americans for Democratic Action; John Foley, president of the Young Democrats of the District; and F. Trowbridge Vom Baur, author and lawyer.

Durr declared that wiretapping is forbidden by the Communications Act. "We can't expect the Attorney General to enforce against others a law which his employes are breaking with his knowledge." Durr said.

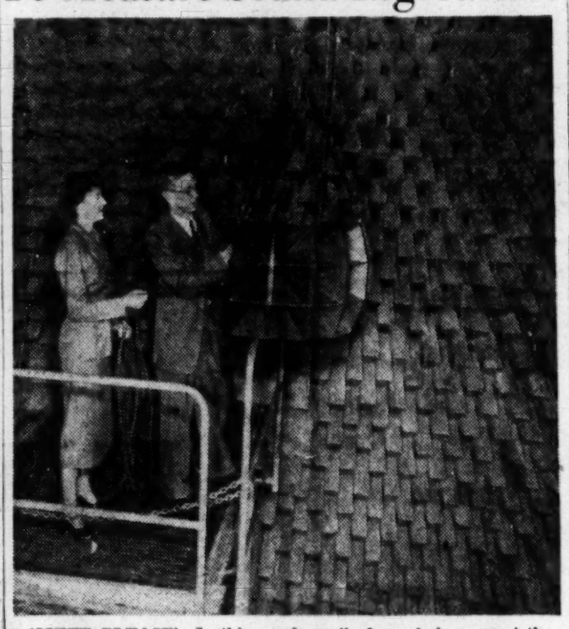
Foley answered that the Supreme Court has held wiretapping to be illegal only when its fruits are divulged.

The FBI, Foley said, uses wiretapping only to find out who suspects are.

Rauh cited the conduct of FBI agents in the wiretapping hearings in the second Coplon trial as evidence that the procedure is "corrupting to the users."

"That's nonsense," Vom Baur said, "wiretapping is not going to corrupt the entire body of the FBI."

Navy Designs Echoless Room To Measure Sound Ingredients



'QUIET, PLEASE'—In this wooden-spiked anechoic room at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., you can't even hear a pin drop. Constance Kerns and Dr. Whitfield Cook are rigging up a horn to use in acoustics experiments. Sound echo can be reduced to a few tenths of 1 percent

The room was so quiet you couldn't even hear a pin drop.

Spoken words came out naturally, but reached the ear in this ghost room as disembodied sound, sound stripped of its richness of hard walls, buildings, trees and rocks.

The clap of hands was single, flat and discouraging. A pistol shot would be even more disappointing, remarked Dr. Whitfield Cook, acoustics scientist, of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md.

He wasn't apologizing. He was showing off his new laboratory, a soundproof room for learning more about sound. It's called the Anechoic Room, or room without echo.

Its prototype in Cruft Laboratory, Harvard, is smaller and perhaps less soundproof, and was dubbed by workmen during its construction "The Dead Room." The name fell flatter than an echoless sound on the ears of the Harvard scientists, who promptly coined the word "anechoic," as scientifically fitting.

Dr. Cook's ghost room—he never calls it that—is one of the most unusual rooms in the world. Its walls, floor and ceiling bristle with long, wedge-pointed bats of fiberglass. More than 30,000 of them spear inward. Their comfortable sponginess alone saves the room from looking like a Poe horror chamber.

Less Than 1 Percent Echoed

The 4½-foot long bats are embedded to absorb all noise produced within the room. Just a few tenths of 1 percent of any sound emitted there is reflected as an echo, Dr. Cook said. In other words, if you don't hear it as it passes you never will 'cause it won't bounce back.

That's the way Dr. Cook and his fellow scientists want it. They want to study noise in its original form, without the disturbances caused from echoes.

NOL scientists expect the room now undergoing instrumentation tests, will prove effective for study of sound ranging as low as 50 cycles a second. Range of the human ear runs from 20 cycles to 20,000 cycles, with the low frequency sounds the hardest to absorb, hardest to strip of their echoes, Dr. Cook said.

Isn't Sound Directional

What turns his research will take, or what practical advantages may result, he can only guess. Sound is a universal phenomenon yet still so little is known about it.

Sound, the layman learned in his youth, radiates in waves like the ripples formed when a stone is tossed into a still pond.

"But does it?" asked Dr. Cook. "Isn't sound directional, too; doesn't it go out stronger in some directions than in others. You don't notice this in conversation in your room at home. When someone is speaking and turns around you scarcely notice it for the walls reflect back what he is saying."

He turned slowly as he spoke, standing there on the catwalk inside his anechoic room. His words seemed to travel away with him as he turned, lowest and hardest to hear when his back was to the listener, and gaining volume again as he came full-face.

Room Is Air-Conditioned

About the nearest approach Nature gives for anechoic conditions, Dr. Cook explained, is still air over a light, fluffy snowfall.

The ghost room is big. Before its spears of fiberglass were installed it was about 50 feet square and 35 feet high. The fiberglass insulation cuts these dimensions by 9 feet.

The room is air-conditioned, too, with temperature and humility controls for further exploring the mysteries of sound. Its catwalk can be stripped down to the framework to minimize sound reflections from it, and the door on rails is insulated as the rest, and fits snugly.

During sound tests no humans will be within the room. Transducers, to emit and receive sound, will be the only occupants, surrounded by the many-surfaced insulation, not caring whether sound is full or flat, whole or disembodied.

Transport Forced Back

Southampton, England, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—The United States Army transport General Alexander Patch, bound for New York with 1400 servicemen and their families, was forced to return to port here today because of a damaged propeller.

The 15,000-ton ship struck a buoy off the Isle of Wight.

Neely Says 'Interests' Block Home Rule

"Some powerful interests" within Washington are preventing the District from getting home rule and suffrage, Senator Mathhew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, charged last night.

In an off-the-cuff speech to the American Business Association and members of the District Democratic Club at the Shoreham Hotel, Neely urged Washingtonians to use "influence" for passage of both measures.

He did not identify the "interests," but said:

"It is to my regret that they do not believe in home rule or the right of the District to have representation in Congress."

Such legislation will be blocked, he added, "as long as Congressmen talking among themselves in the cloakrooms can say, 'Well, they don't all want it, you see.'"

Neely is author of a joint resolution which would give District residents the vote for representatives in Congress and for presidential and vice presidential electors. It calls for a Constitutional amendment.

He urged support of his resolution and also the Kafauver Bill.

Senator Neely was to have been principal speaker last week at a "Votes for Washington" dinner in the Mayflower Hotel sponsored by the District Democratic Club. The meeting was postponed.

The dinner last night, attended by members of the Democratic group, honored Senator Neely; Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner; Floyd A. Truscott, assistant superintendent of police, and Municipal Court Judge Milton S. Kronheim, jr.

A Petition to The Congress of the United States

from 51 Executives in American Industry

The wartime excise taxes were passed as wartime controls in 1941, 1942, 1943, They served their purpose well.

But the war is over. It has been over for more than four years.

Everyone agrees today that wartime excise taxes are unfair in peacetime.

They are discriminatory. They penalize selected industries, the men and women who work in them, the public which needs and buys their products.

They have created serious unemployment in certain industries and communities. They prevent fair and free competition.

* * * *

EVERYONE AGREES with this statement of the President in his Tax Message:

> "There is need to reduce taxes which burden consumption and handicap particular businesses . . . Some (excise taxes) are depressing certain lines of business. Some burden consumption and fall with particular weight on low income groups. Still others add to the cost of living by increasing business costs."

And—this statement is just and statesmanlike.

We believe that the same sound reasoning applies not only to the 7 industries for which the President recommended some relief—but applies with equal force and equal justice to all of the wartime excise tax levies of 1941, 1942, 1943* on all of the 27 industries affected.

These excise taxes were justified during wartime. They are unjust and discriminatory during peacetime. To repeal some of them now and allow others to remain is only to alter the shape of the discrimination.

* * * *

We support the President in his concern for a balanced budget and debt reduction at high employment, and we are convinced, after careful study, that wartime excise taxes are today a dangerous obstacle to the achievement of these goals.

This is a matter of simple arithmetic.

1. How much revenue would the Federal Government lose if the wartime excise taxes of 1941, 1942, 1943 were ENTIRELY repealed?* The net loss will not exceed 1½ billion dollars; it may well be less.
2. Can the Federal Government safely accept such a reduction of revenue? The budget now includes $1,920,000,000 to make loans and purchase certain assets, many of which are already guaranteed by Government agencies. Guaranteed mortgages and loans are a major part of this item. This $1,920,000,000 is not an expense; it is a recoverable asset. (See page 1117 of the Federal Budget just published.)
3. This sum alone is greater than the maximum net loss of all wartime excise taxes of 1941, 1942, 1943*.

American consumers have already registered their protest against these wartime levies.

They have done so by drastically cutting their spending in most of the 27 industries affected.

They are waiting for their Congress to act. Every passing week adds to the cut-back in buying, in production, in unemployment.

Every passing week adds to the crisis.

This Committee has been organized for the sole purpose of presenting a just petition for the redress of a serious grievance.

We ask justice for the public which pays these unfair taxes. Justice for those of our employees who have been taxed onto the relief rolls through no fault of their own. Justice for communities disrupted by unemployment. And justice for the men and women who have invested in our companies.

In this spirit, we—active heads and executives of our businesses, Democrats and Republicans alike—solemnly exercise the American right of petition. We appeal to the conscience and the reason of the Congress:

REPEAL the wartime excise taxes of 1941, 1942, 1943*.
REPEAL these taxes COMPLETELY.
REPEAL these taxes NOW!

Not including tobacco, gasoline and alcoholic beverages which present problems of their own.*

One on the Aisle—

Did You Ever See A Globule Walking?

By Richard L. Coe

NOT THAT THE vaults of old films suitable for reshowing are exhausted, but something new is in the cards anyway for film followers at the Institute of Contemporary Arts.

Beginning this Friday night the first in a series of ten 16 millimeter films will be shown, giving the avant garde public a whale of fascinatin' tidbits to gnaw.

This "Cinema 16" library comes from a New York firm that's made an interesting spatter in the exhibition world. Its library is frankly experimental, devoted to all the unusual and wonderful things that the magical cameras can catch.

Friday night's program will be comparatively easy and surely interesting. Alexander Hammid's "The Private Life of a Cat" will be the opener; its title gives you the idea. Hammid is the maker of "The Forgotten Village,"a famed 16mm that will be shown April 21. Three "Abstract Film Exercises" by the Whitney brothers, "The Art of Henry Moore" and an abstract "using animated clay" complete the first bill.

On later programs you'll find a notable film long overdue here, "The Story of the Bees," a Russian scientific film, an international prize winner and one widely praised by Americans who've seen it. Then there's "Le Bijou," described as "a poetic treatment of inanimate objects serving as actors in the perilous adventures of a colorful jewel." "Hen Hop" is Norman McClaren's color animation, "handpainted on film without camera."

There also will be some of the more famed documentaries that have achieved wide popularity on larger scale celluloid: Pare Lorentz' "The River," with Virgil Thomson's score: "Valley Town," Will Van Dyke's study of unemployment, music by Marc Blitzstein and John Steinbeck's "Forgotten Village," a feature-length study of Mexico.

But the accent of the series will be on the unusual in color, design and subject matter. The "Cinema 16" people have collected their prints from private individuals, Government agencies and makers of specialized films.

Certainly if you've ever been curious about the acting qualifications of such things as chromium-plated cellophane, globules, colored glass, tin foil and diamonds, the new Contemporary Arts series will answer your questions. For further information, write them at 1322 New York ave., or call STerling 6266.

THE TWO CURRENT war pictures, "Battleground" and "Sands of Iwo Jima," have prompted a spate of mail about the virtues and vices of both.

One reader, who remarks, "I'm no veteran soldier, but I was in the Battle of the Bulge for a little while," finds that "Batleground" is "the same old trash, the Hollywood Rover Boys at work again." He writes:

"That hillbilly soldier who threw his shoes out of the foxhole every night. Nobody did that. Nobody. The platoon sergeant got trenchfoot, didn't he. Why, then, didn't the hillbilly's feet freeze? . . . Those soldiers didn't have enough clothes on . . . And what, I'd like to ask, happens to those fellows. Where was a German tank? Where was a burp gun? . . . And as for that ending, getting in step and singing. Boy, they'd have been razzed if they had."

Our correspondent on "Sands of Iwo Jima" is more kindly, though he strongly makes the point of this corner's review: "Those beach scenes were swell, but what about that story? What about the things those guys talked about? What about that phony romance? . . . No, Mr. Coe, you were softer on that one than I would have been."

Both those fellows were on the spot. I wasn't. I've no doubt that they're telling their true reactions and I can see that such points would boil them mightily.

THE TEMPLE PLAYERS, newly organized acting group of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, will make its bow Wednesday night, February 8, in Rose Franken's "Another Language" at the Cafritz Auditorium, 16th and Que sts. nw. . . . Rudolph Pugliese, of the Maryland U. drama department, will direct . . . Mrs. Ruth Sharlin, 7606 16th st. nw., is ticket chairman.

THE APEX will be showing Louis DeRochemont's "Lost Boundaries" tonight and tomorrow.

TONIGHT bring's that sparkling revue, "Lend an Ear," into Ford's Theater, Baltimore, for a week's stay . . . Apart from that "Gladiola Girl" spoof of a 1925 musical that's been lost in the provinces for 20 years, it also boasts a neat sketch on opera without song, "Words Without Music," as witty a take-off on things operatic as ever was . . . John Beal, Gloria Hamilton, William Skipper and Dorothy Babbs top the cast.

NO MONDAY BLUES: For most of us, the beginning of the week is tough, but not for Colleen Townsend, newcomer of the Twentieth-Century-Fox lot, who's got a top part opposite Dan Dailey, jr., in "When Willie Comes Marching Home." California-born Colleen says she's specially fond of Mondays

Trumans and Large Audience Hear Helen Traubel's Recital

By Richard Keith

President and Mrs. Truman and daughter, Margaret, attended Helen Traubel's recital yesterday afternoon at Constitution Hall. In addition to America's No. 1 family, a large audience heard America's No. 1 dramatic soprano.

After singing a group of stirring songs by Beethoven, Miss Traubel sang the popular aria from Mascagni's Cavalleria Rusticana, "Voi Lo Sapete." This was an impromtu substitution for the previously listed aria from Gluck's Alceste. Although she has been heard many times in the latter aria, the fiery Mascagni tour de force was not a satisfactory replacement. Her style of singing simply lacks the necessary chianti and garlic needed for this blood-and-thunder scene.

The true greatness of voice and style came out in the Schubert and Strauss songs. Here, Miss Traubel displayed not only her tremendous dramatic power in such songs as "Der Atlas" and "Zueignmunz," but also her perfect control of volume and phrasing in "Nacht und Traueme" and "Morgen." It would be hard to imagine a more beautifully sung Schubert song than yesterday's performance of "Nacht und Traueme."

Following two Chopin pieces for piano by her accompanist, Coenraad V. Bos, she sang Isolde's Narrative from "Tristan and Isolde." Although the lack of an orchestra was keenly felt, the intrinsic strength of Wagner's drama was heroically projected. The same should be said for the excerpts from "Tannhauser" and "Die Walkuere," sung as encores.

As for most of the other encores and the entire last group, one felt that Traubel was, quite incongruously, playing with paper dolls. Why she or her manager thinks that the people who come to hear her for her splendid interpretations of great music must be tickled by such a collection of inanities as one has grown used to expect from lesser concert singers is a mystery.

County Cooperative To Elect Directors

Directors will be elected by the Montgomery County Cooperative Agricultural Center, Inc., at its first annual membership meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the Gaithersburg School gymnasium.

Also scheduled is adoption of bylaws prepared and approvel by a board of 20 incorparators, who have served as directors pending a membership election. Officers of the center will be elected later by the new board.

...is outlined in our newly published Commemorative Booklet and Annual Report for 1949. The beginning of the booklet is given over to the history of our first half-century: It tells how our bank came into being and about the men who had most to do with its founding. It follows our growth and the physical changes which accompanied this growth. Attractive pictures illustrate the text.
The second half of the booklet tells of the contributions of the Union Trust Company to the financial progress of our community in 1949. It contains our statement of condition at the year-end and gives in detail our results for the year.

HOW TO LEARN TO LIVE AGAIN

FOREWORD: This is an outspoken attempt to discuss, with complete frankness, a condition that has become one of the world's most widespread human maladies... constipation. A delicate subject at best, it has been under medical and scientific scrutiny for years. We believe we owe it to those who suffer from it, to publish these pertinent facts.

UNION PHARMACEUTICAL CO., INC

The pace of modern living has been blamed for many things.

And those who have blamed it have been very often right.

Our lives today have become so intricate, so complicated with daily problems our grandparents never knew existed, that it is little wonder so many long for the "good old days"—when life was simple, and hustle-and-bustle unknown.

We have even envied the caveman — who took life and death as he found it, ate his food raw, and, as the saying goes, "got plenty of roughage" in his diet.

Doctors know that the whole digestive system is strongly influenced by proper food, regularity and rest.

Their ideal "prescription" for maintaining natural elimination is: (a) Eat a balanced diet at regular hours; (b) Drink plenty of water daily; (c) Get at least 8 hours sleep; (d) Take regular exercise; (e) Always obey the urge to eliminate waste; (f) Don't worry or fret over problems you cannot immediately solve.

Few of us, indeed, obey these health commandments. Worst of all, we let worry get the better of us almost daily.

Thus, it is said, civilization has been the underlying cause of most constipation—because today's scanty, hurriedly eaten meals do not supply the bulk necessary to proper elimination, and physical exercise is limited to an occasional dip in the lake or a weekly round of golf.

Hence: Constipation!

Occasional Constipation Can Become Chronic

The lack of both bulk and exercise is, of course, a contributing factor in many cases.

But it is not the whole answer.

In practically all cases of constipation, other causes are far more significant. And this is equally true whether these cases are chronic or, as at first, merely occasional.

In fact, the "occasional" case can easily become chronic. And the chronic case, when neglected or unwisely attended to, can reach extremes of distress which respond only to the most skilled and intelligent medical treatment.

Can such extremes be avoided? Yes.

But not with laxatives, as so many people use them.

More Than One Type of Constipation

There are, of course, several types of constipation, springing from a variety of causes.

Two basic types, however, are most common and most persistent:

1. Those organic in source, requiring skilled medical care.
2. Those "functional" in nature, requiring wise mechanical correction.

The first type, obviously, is entirely a doctor's problem. No mere "laxative" sold in a package can be of real benefit here.

But the second type, although often serious enough to call for a doctor's advice, is of an entirely different nature.

It is this "functional" type, in which THE INTESTINES FAIL ADEQUATELY TO PERFORM THEIR WORK, that can be justly blamed on modern living.

—FOR IT IS ALL TOO OFTEN CAUSED BY THE NERVE-WRACKING LIVES WE LEAD.

The end of each day leaves millions so tense, so nervously exhausted and drained of physical energy, that every muscle feels tight—INCLUDING THE INTESTINAL MUSCLES. IN FACT, IT HAS BEEN SAID, THE WHOLE HUMAN DIGESTIVE SYSTEM CAN BE ALMOST LITERALLY "TIED IN A KNOT" BY SHEER NERVOUS TENSION.

Stop and think, for a moment, how you spend an average day.

Instead of obeying the common sense health commandments of the medical profession, here is what happens:

You rise in the morning, often startled out of a sound sleep by the alarm-clock or a peremptory knock on your door.

You rush to dress. You gulp breakfast, or all too often skip it. You rush for a train or bus, or to get the children off to school. Then the office, or a mad race against time —housecleaning, shopping, cooking, washing, a thousand-and-one daily tasks no caveman nor grandparent was ever faced with. Lunch? You hadn't time; or at best you "grabbed a sandwich."

If you were lucky, you read or lay down for half-an-hour in the afternoon. But then comes the wind-up of the daylight hours. The children home. Trains to catch or meet. Dinner to prepare. Dishes to wash. And hurry—you're playing bridge this evening.

Finally you fall into bed—knowing that tomorrow you will repeat the same frantic pattern. Strain, pressure, rush, hurry. Every muscle straining to go faster, faster. Your whole body is tense as soon as you open your eyes. And it stays tense for 10, 12, 15 hours.

That's the answer to the second type of constipation. Sheer nerve-ridden muscular tension that prevents the intestines from properly doing their work.

Be Careful of "Fast Acting" Laxatives

But this muscular tension is only the beginning. You can rush and hurry for years, and except for the occasional type of sluggishness, feel no real ill effect.

But sooner or later, you begin to realize that your intestinal elimination is getting more and more out of whack.

You're just rushed, you think—that's all. You haven't taken the time to attend to this function. Wastes remain too long in the lower intestinal tract. Something must be done about it—fast. Why suffer, when you can get something that will act in an hour?

So, to get quick action, you take a laxative that "works fast." And you get two kinds of results.

You get the fast action, of course.

But the faster you get it, the more likely you are to start a chain of circumstances that in time can make you a chronic sufferer.

For the faster many of these drugs act, the more probable it is that they contain harsh chemicals, scratchy particles, or violent purges which may (a) bring on a digestive disturbance; (b) irritate an already over-sensitive intestinal tract; (c) cause a further slackening of intestinal activity.

It is self-evident that by doing this same thing, again and again, first at occasional intervals and then with increasing frequency, one can bring on a chronic condition calling for long and expensive medical treatment.

This is not to imply that all laxatives cause this unfortunate result. There are many products available through your doctor or druggist, which do not have all of these drawbacks.

But it is a fact that many of the pills, liquids and salts in common use today contain irritating, griping, violent-acting ingredients—designed for fast one-time action—which if persisted in will form the vicious circle of dosage, dosage and more dosage.

And no harsh "laxative," in the ordinary sense of the word, can overcome this chronic condition or break this vicious circle.

The opposite kind of product—which acts without griping, irritation, scratching or violent purging—is called for in cases like these.

No Griping, Irritation, Scratching or Violent Purging

What is this opposite kind of product?

Let's review the requirements and see.

Obviously,* it must contain no ingredient that can unduly aggravate the already over-sensitive intestinal muscular condition.

—Therefore, it should contain no harsh chemicals, purgatives, seeds or scratchy roughage.

Obviously,* it must encourage the muscles of the intestinal tract to do their work in their own natural way, thus helping to reestablish the functional rhythm which every normal human being should have.

—Therefore, it should afford some means of gently and mechanically urging the intestinal muscles to self-regulated action.

Obviously,* it must not interfere with absorption of essential body elements which normally are retained in the intestines.

—Therefore (unlike improperly taken mineral oils), it should allow complete absorption of the essential Vitamin A.

Obviously,* it must contain a bland mass bulkage which will not interfere with the resumption of the normal intestinal rhythm, and which will give the expulsion muscles at the end of the intestinal tract something to work on.

—Therefore, it should expand, on contact with water and the digestive juices, into a smooth mass called "softage" that glides easily along the intestinal wall, and will not harden or clog.

This "opposite" type of product must be pleasant, efficient and economical to take. It must produce no violence, pain, or embarrassing urgency. And it must be sufficiently positive in action to relieve constipation promptly—not with "laxative" speed but within 24 hours or less.

This type of product is both safe and effective in helping to correct constipation.

All of these requirements are met by Saraka, recommended and prescribed by thousands of physicians during the past 15 years.

No Laxative Sensation

It is proper, of course, to class Saraka in the so-called laxative field.

But in fact, Saraka does not (in the publicly accepted sense) give the laxative type of results.

On the contrary, Saraka is not simply designed to quickly overcome a temporary condition. Saraka starts immediately to aid in the restoration of the functional rhythm to which the intestines were accustomed, before the fast pace of modern living threw them off the track.

Here are the facts about Saraka; facts of importance to those afflicted:

1. It forms bland, gliding "softage," 20 times its original bulk, which with gentle persistence allows the weakened, irritated or tensed-up intestines to get back to work as soon as they are able to do so.
2. It works so pleasantly that you forget you have taken anything at all—no griping, no urgency.
3. It acts with satisfying thoroughness; you feel the pleasant relief that comes with regular elimination.
4. It leaves no exhausting after-effect; you are "happy about the whole thing."
5. It usually acts with greater promptness than products that depend solely on bulk, mass or roughage for effect.
6. Because of its expansion and efficiency, it is amazingly economical to use.

This last point deserves special mention. A single teaspoonful of Saraka expands to many times its original size. This is due to one of its vegetable ingredients called bassorin. Bassorin has three times the expansion power of plantago (psyllium seed); ten times that of agar; and twenty times that of bran. Bassorin, together with a vegetable intestinal urger called frangula, produces the "bulk plus motility," or mass plus gentle urging, for which Saraka is famous. Together, these two ingredients bring to bear on the intestines a balanced combination which results in more normal, more natural, more regular elimination.

Learn to Live Again

We need not point out the sense of well-being, of mental satisfaction, of aliveness and health, which this regularity brings about in you.

This feeling "sticks out all over you"; makes you feel as though you look better too. A haggard, dragged-out appearance is regarded as the by-product of harsh types of laxatives. Saraka's by-product is the feeling of contentment that comes from satisfactory elimination.

We believe that constipation sufferers will welcome this information. Some, of course, should consult a physician. However, if you find in Saraka the relief you have longed for, we are willing to risk the criticisms of those who might protest that to discuss such a subject in print is unseemly.

Obnoxious Tax

We sincerely hope that Congress will take affirmative action on the proposal of the District assessor to abolish the personal property tax on household goods. The limited amount of revenue lost by abolition of the tax could, the assessor believes, be offset by a shift of personnel that would permit his subordinates to give more attention to the checking of personal property-tax returns. In any case it would not be difficult to find offsetting sources of revenue to make up for any loss resulting from abolition of the tax on household effects. The methods employed in the valuation of household goods literally compel taxpayers to perjure themselves, since few householders are able to determine the fair cash value of their personal possessions.

The inequity of this obnoxious tax is demonstrated by the fact that the taxes paid by some individuals are three or four times the amount paid by others on comparable property. The rule-of-thumb methods of appraisal employed by the assessor's office in revising the returns of individuals whose declarations are believed to be too low also results in inequality of treatment. The essential unfairness of the tax and the difficulty of enforcement creates public resentment and encourages tax evasion by ordinarily conscientious people. Its demoralizing effect is the strongest possible argument in favor of its repeal.

Judicial Box Scores

Criticism of the Supreme Court in recent years has found increasing expression in statistical tables. Almost every amateur observer of judicial affairs seems to be keeping his own "box score" in an effort to prove that the court is moving to the left or the right or that his favorite justice is faithfully adhering to this or that constitutional doctrine. The latest effort of this sort was an article by Irving Dilliard, editor of the editorial page of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, in a recent issue of the Atlantic Monthly. Mr. Dilliard presents tables to show that the late Justices Murphy and Rutledge were the most persistent champions of civil rights on the supreme bench. This leads him to conclude that the rights of the citizen will have less protection in the present court than they have had in recent years.

Mr. Dilliard admits that the judicial box score has its limitations. Cases, he admits, are not exact equals in importance. More serious is the fact that the box score tends to eliminate most of the considerations on which a court decision turns. It ignores the vital question of whether the vote of each judge is right or wrong on the basis of the facts and the law, and counts only a routine response as if the verdict in any given case involving a civil rights issue should always be the same. If this were to be the test of our judges, better results might be obtained by putting on the bench robots who could always give the answer prescribed by the makers of box scores.

Actually, of course, most of the cases that go before the Supreme Court are a complex of many different issues. Mr. Dilliard shaped his box score as if judges were sworn to uphold the Bill of Rights and nothing else. But any judge worth his salt is mindful of the entire Constitution and the nice balance of governmental power which it establishes. The Bill of Rights must be viewed in its proper relation to the entire constitutional structure. Some of the most distinguished students of our political system have pointed out that the division of powers between different units of government is a more important safeguard to civil liberties than the Bill of Rights standing alone. The justice who lays emphasis on the maintenance of our Federal system may thus be a wiser champion of civil rights than the one who tries to impose upon the States a common pattern in nonessentials. Indeed, the judge who tends to close his mind to the facts of the case before him and vote automatically in favor of every right claimed by a citizen is more of a recording machine than a judicial statesman.

Fortunately, the box-score method of judging the judges has at last been challenged, and very ably. Mark DeWolfe Howe, who is writing the biography of Justice Holmes, points out in an answer to Mr. Dilliard that "in every case involving civil liberties which comes to the Supreme Court there are issues of Federal jurisdiction and of the relationship of the judicial power to the legislative and executive powers which are inescapable and which, in numerous instances, are of controlling importance."

For example, Mr. Dilliard credits five justices with standing for civil liberties in the Terminiello case. What they actually did was to set aside Terminiello's conviction in Illinois for breach of the peace growing out of his provocation of violence. Aside from this stretching of freedom of speech to cover riotous conduct, the court based its reversal on a ground that had not been raised in the courts of Illinois and had not been argued in the United States Supreme Court. This violation of the settled practice of the Supreme Court for 130 years was, as Justice Frankfurter pointed out at the time, ample justification for the dissenting votes. Yet the dissenters were bracketed as standing in opposition to civil liberties. We hope that Mr. Howe's expose of this shallow thinking about the judicial process will hasten the relegation of box scores to the sports pages—where they belong.

Anti-Lewis Bill

Senator Robertson has raised a basic issue with his bill to restore in part the meaning of the Sherman Act before the Supreme Court began to exclude labor unions from its provisions. Recognizing that the Government has no effective means of dealing with the sort of emergency that John L. Lewis is now imposing on the country, other than seeking a temporary injunction under the Taft-Hartley Act, Senator Robertson proposes to make such conduct illegal and enjoinable in the courts. He would not strike at all restraints of interstate commerce by organized labor, but only at unreasonable restraints affecting the national economy, health or safety.

The bill is a product of an investigation conducted last year by a subcommittee headed by Senator Robertson. The committee found numerous instances of restraint of trade due to labor monopolies. In his thoughtful analysis of the problem for the Senate Mr. Robertson said:

> The original purpose of the Sherman Act was to prevent restraints of trade and monopolization intended to restrict production, fix prices, or otherwise control the market to the detriment of the consuming public. The public can be hurt just as badly when these restraints are imposed by labor unions as it can when these restraints are imposed by business combinations, and in fact no business combination of which I have ever heard has achieved the kind of arbitrary power and control that John L. Lewis now possesses and wields.

There is likely to be disagreement, however, as to the specific remedy that Senator Robertson proposes. Behind the application of the Sherman Act to labor disputes is a long history of unwarranted interference with collective bargaining that should not be repeated. To be sure, Mr. Robertson attempts to safeguard his bill against restoration of these abuses by narrowing its scope. He would curb only those labor monopolies that have "unreasonably restrained" interstate commerce to the detriment of the national economy, health or safety. But unreasonable restraint of interstate commerce is a very vague phrase that would express little more than the wish of Congress to do something about strikes which become intolerable from the national point of view. We have serious doubts about the wisdom of inviting the courts to intervene in labor disputes under such an indefinite prescription of their responsibility.

Congress will wish to examine this bill with the greatest care. It deals with an extremely complex subject, and the results of a mistake would be very serious. But it seems to us that some means must be provided for protection of the public interest against production controls arbitrarily imposed by any tycoon to compel an industry or a group of industries to bow to his will.

Perhaps a better approach would be a direct effort to improve the section of the Taft-Hartley Act dealing with national emergencies resulting from strikes. Congress is likely to write a better law if it aims directly at the abuses of labor dictatorship of the John L. Lewis type than if it simply amends the Sherman Act, which, after all, was primarily designed to serve a different purpose. If no sound statute can be devised to prevent the crippling of our national economy for the advantage of strategically placed labor groups, the only alternative may be to outlaw industry-wide bargaining. Organized labor ought to realize that the people will not long endure crisis upon crisis in the national economy simply because a few individuals have acquired the power to halt essential industries to gain their demands. In other words, labor itself has a vital stake in helping to devise fair means of curbing abuses that become intolerable.

Last Word On H-Bomb

In saying that he, and no one else, will decide whether or not the United States shall undertake to make hydrogen bombs, President Truman has stirred up a needless controversy. Probably he did not intend to say that his is the one and only authoritative voice in this realm of defense policy-making. It is more reasonable to suppose that the President's hasty reply to a question at his press conference was intended to indicate only that he, rather than the scientists, legislators and commentators who are so widely discussing this problem, would decide what recommendation should be made to Congress on the H-bomb. But his words convey the impression that he alone will make an authoritative national policy on a matter of the utmost importance to the people.

For the sake of clear public understanding, we hope that the President will correct this impression. To be sure, the President has broad powers as Commander in Chief of the Nation's armed forces. But the power "to raise and support armies," which includes the making and procurement of weapons, is unmistakably given to Congress. Congress could order construction of an H-bomb regardless of what the decision of the President might be, unless he should veto the bill and Congress should sustain the veto. If, on the other hand, the President should decide that the country ought to build the H-bomb, he would have to go to Congress for funds to finance that costly venture. Congress could grant or deny the funds.

It is not to be supposed that Congress would adopt such a policy without the advice of the President, the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Nor can we conceive of the President attempting to launch such a momentous step without the approval of Congress. If undertakings of such importance to the people could be initiated and carried out upon the decision of one man, our representative system of government would be gravely impaired. Of course, the President faces the primary decision as to what policy his Administration will recommend and stand by. That in itself is a responsibility of such magnitude that it can scarcely be exaggerated. But surely the final word must be spoken by the representatives of the people after the President has laid his case before them.

Tramburg Resignation

The resignation of John W. Tramburg, director of the District's Department of Public Welfare, to become welfare director in his home State of Wisconsin, is a serious loss to the community. Mr. Tramburg has held the local position for only a year and a half, but in that time he has fully gained the confidence of the people as well as that of the Commissioners and his departmental staff. His standing with the Commissioners was doubtless reflected in the notable increase in the welfare budget that went to Congress early this month. While that budget is tragically inadequate in its allowance for direct relief, it does call for funds to begin some of the more important institutions for which the city has been asking for years.

In recommending Gerard M. Shea, superintendent of the Industrial Home School, to succeed Mr. Tramburg, the Board of Public Welfare is following a pattern that proved successful in the case of Mr. Tramburg. He, too, was head of the Industrial Home School when he was chosen for the higher position. More important are Mr. Shea's 11 years of experience in social work and the vigor and understanding that have made him successful at the Industrial Home School. He is a tireless worker and has proved to be a faithful public servant. He is the unanimous choice of the Board of Public Welfare. In these circumstances the Commissioners would have to have a compelling reason for any decision to reject the board's recommendation.

Sabotage Bargaining

President Joseph A. Beirne of the CIO Communications Workers of America has a new formula for making friends and influencing people—especially the big bad moguls of the Bell system telephone companies. Treat 'em rough, is the formula he has outlined in a letter to CIO President Philip Murray. If the telephone companies will not agree to union demands, then flood switchboards with calls in the hope that automatic dial equipment will break down. No matter that union demands have not even been presented in some areas and that the conventional practice is to bargain before pulling a strike. No matter either, that lack of telephone service might inconvenience a few people whose houses were on fire, or who wanted a policeman, or whose children needed a doctor. Take it out on the public; this will assuredly win sympathy regardless of the issues. What Mr. Beirne wants, in this new school of sabotage-cum-meat-ax industrial statesmanship, is a boycott in reverse—give the phone companies more business than they can handle. We suggest that if Mr. Beirne is so foolish as to put this plan into effect, the President may be compelled also to give him the business—through the emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Talking Dog

One of the neatest pieces of traffic safety education that has come to our attention is The Story of the Talking Dog. A humorously illustrated pamphlet prepared by the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board, it relates in Thurberesque fashion a fable of Rover, the safety-conscious Washington dog, who managed to bark a warning just in time to prevent his flighty young master, Bill, from running in front of a car. Naturally, the moral is that Bill thereupon learned the importance of safety rules and Rover was able to retire with a clear conscience to his old leisurely pursuits. We wish the whole problem of safety education were so simple; nonetheless, it is by little homely examples, as much as through cold statistics, that the rules of safe conduct can be brought home, especially to youthful minds. The technique commends itself to wide use in the schools.

LET WINTER STAY

Let winter stay—in the mind—
While treachery and treason
Leave tracks for us to find
Upon the snows of reason.

And while the coldness stings,
Track down from everywhere
The predatory things,
Back to the fetid lair.

We need the light grown clear,
Hard surface, plain device—
And cold flames burning here
In the precision of ice.

Let Winter stay—but when
The ice goes out, let the roar
Resound through the world again . . .
That hearts may doubt no more!

Communism By Force

In its relationship with Russia the United States has walked into an insidious trap. The fallacy is the persistent idea that people even under completely totalitarian systems still stand in their own right, capable of independent expression. It is assumed that properly appealed to, the people can move to end the injustices under which they labor. It is believed, for example, that if a nation is communistic it is so because the people accept it. Based on this conception, even Secretary Acheson asks: "Who are we in the United States to tell the Chinese people that they must choose our form of Government rather than their own?"

This misses the crucial point altogether. Even when communism is not what the people want, and there comes a time when it is not what they want, the people are absolutely powerless to even indicate their opposition or rejection.

Our Government's policy toward China is the most recent evidence of our blindness. The great bulk of the Chinese people may continue tending their rice fields as they have for centuries and thus seem to be the same as ever, but this has no bearing on the actual military domination which the Soviets achieved in China. It is only necessary for the Russians to control sources of supply, communications and central government to, in effect, own every human being in China and to turn the efforts of those human beings toward whatever purpose the Soviets may have.

It is, therefore, beside the point of Secretary of State Acheson to warn us against ill-advised schemes which would divert the anger of the Chinese people from Russia toward the United States. No one surely can really fear the attitude of the Chinese people toward us, and I am sure no one is silly enough to believe that the anger of the Chinese masses worries the Communist masters in the least.

Prince Georges Schools

As former residents of Prince Georges County, Md., my husband and I wish to cheer you on in your campaign on conditions in the schools. We have been in Michigan a year now and our children are just getting over the complexes and lack of suitable academic training they experienced in Hyattsville. We had a child problem concerning fear to attend school and the principal here was able to give her personal time to taking the child to the playground and by having me bring him most of the way to school, she solved the problem. My little girl, a first grader in Maryland, was completely bewildered on entering first grade here as, according to this teacher, she had learned absolutely nothing in her three months in Hyattsville school. Within six weeks, however, she was ready to take her rightful place with the class.

We note Mrs. Meyer refers to lack of space in one school so severe that a child with mumps and a high temperature had to wait in the principal's office until he could go home. One of the things that was grief to us was the continual harping of both principal and teachers that our children must attend school even if sick unless they had an obvious fever. The reason for this ruling was that the average daily attendance had to be kept up or else the school lost a teacher. There is something wrong with a situation like this.

My husband and I fully realize that back of inadequate personnel and rules is the situation you are endeavoring to clear up—overcrowding, poor building facilities and lack of funds. We merely wish to express our pleasure that such a serious social crisis is being brought to light by such a reliable newspaper.

Police Boys Clubs

This inquiry is made after reading Reader's letter of January 19.

Is the Police Boys Club organization a legally constituted part of the Police Department and if so, when was the legislation creating it enacted?

With reference to C. . . Harvey Callahan's testimony before a congressional committee in 1941 investigating the Police Department, it should serve a good purpose to call the attention of the present congressional committee investigating crime to the 1941 investigation and ask them to review the findings.

There is much confusion in Washington relative to the multiplicity of campaigns for funds and the legitimacy of some of the appeals. The Community Chest was created some years ago to consolidate all of the private social agency campaigns for the conservation of human effort and financial resources. The campaign slogan was "Give once for all." Conditions today would prompt the slogan "Give all for everything." Let's get together and put our house in order.

Hiss' Guilt

What diagnosis would Dr. Carl Binger give Alger Hiss? Whatever the testimony concerning Chambers' psychopathic personality, what deep guilt is Hiss atoning for in his persistent efforts to bring conviction on himself?

Unlike the other men accused by Chambers, he went out of his way to appear before the House Un-American Activities Committee though he could have sidestepped the matter as did the others.

Not content with that, he instituted a suit for libel against Chambers, and it was in the course of this suit that the pumpkin papers came to light.

Finally he is responsible for finding and presenting before the court the condemning typewriter.

Has conviction given Alger Hiss what he wanted?

Jefferson School

This is in reply to the letter of January 25 by M.E.L., concerning the Thomas Jefferson School in Falls Church. This is not to discuss whether the old structure is a fire trap, but to clear up several historical errors.

Firstly, Thomas Jefferson Institute, now "Jefferson School," or "Old Jefferson," was not built in 1870, but 10 years later, 1880. Secondly it was not used as a soap factory, for that matter any kind of factory, but was built and operated as a school for the past 70 years. Nor was Jefferson School ever a hospital of any kind.

As a building, the old school has seen its best day and is no longer fit for the use to which it is put. It was fine in "Grandmother's" day, but it is of little value to the community today.

"Conflict Of Loyalties"

We must, for many reasons, express our deep disappointment in the views expressed by The Washington Post in its editorial of January 27 on "Conflict of Loyalties."

We had reason to hope that, in these trying times when no demagogue dares run counter to the deep-running current of fear and intolerance, your paper would regard Secretary Acheson's statement on Alger Hiss as an act of personal courage and a declaration of principle rare in past history and virtually unprecedented in these times.

We do not propose to argue the question of Alger Hiss' innocence or guilt. Nor do we see the relevancy of that question to Secretary Acheson's noble assertion that he would not turn his back upon a friend.

Whether Alger Hiss is innocent or guilty, we believe that Secretary Acheson has reaffirmed with great simplicity and magnificent restraint the fundamental principle that no man is guilty of crime until the courts have confirmed his guilt; and that in a Christian and democratic society men may extend compassionate sympathy to their fellow man even though they may be ultimately persuaded of his guilt before the law.

We agree with the New York Post that "in a free society millions will understand Acheson's act and respect it, whatever they think about the Hiss-Chambers case."

We agree, too, with the position taken by the New York Herald Tribune: "Of this statement made on Wednesday in a difficult hour, we are glad to declare that in our judgment it was as courageous as it was Christian."

Far too many high officials today regard public courage as a luxury which only private citizens can afford. Far too many men in high office take the easy road and subordinate their own principles and beliefs to the heavy pressures that bear upon them. Secretary Acheson's statement should give heart to those who recognize that free government demands and deserves courageous leadership.

We firmly believe that even if Secretary Acheson had avoided the subject and filibustered his views on Alger Hiss, the "yammerers in our midst" and the Formosa-firsters would have been no more charitable toward his position. Indeed, one can venture the hope that their knowledge of the depth and caliber of the man at whom they are "yammering" will give them pause in their struggle against him.

Young people throughout the Nation who in the past have aspired to Government careers are turning elsewhere today because they genuinely fear that if they are hounded and harassed by the "yammerers," no one will raise his voice in their defense. Dean Acheson has given inspiration to those who aspire to Government service and renewed faith to those already in the Government service.

Tung Nuts and Honey

IF YOU ARE a bit bemused by all the bellowing about the "welfare state," it is a good idea to look into the present status of national farm policy. Here is where you can see how state economic planning may really work in America, simply because state planning has advanced further in this particular economic sector than in any other.

Because of Federal farm support prices, a very high proportion of all the major crops of this country now passes through the hands of a Government agency, the Commodity Credit Corporation. The CCC makes loans on, or purchases outright, everything from cotton and wheat to blue lupine seeds. It controls vast storage facilities, deals actively on the commodity exchanges, and offers farm products for exports. Secretary of Agriculture Brannan has just asked that the CCC's capital be increased by two billion dollars.

Nor does the Government stop at subsidizing the farmers under the cover of the CCC's highly philanthropic banking and trading operation. The Government is also empowered to exercise a considerable measure of control over the acreages of each crop that the farmers may plant.

THE FIRST THING you discover when you venture into this vital area of national policy, is that this is the happy hunting ground of special interests. Last year, for example, Secretary Brannan very nearly succeeded in getting an Administration-approved farm bill through the Senate. At the last minute, however, he was defeated by his great enemies, the American Farm Bureau Federation, and the previous Secretary of Agriculture, now the strongest man in the Senate Agriculture Committee, Senator Clinton Anderson, of New Mexico.

How was this great defeat administered to Brannan? The answer is simple. The Brannan-approved bill did not offer support prices to tung nuts, honey and pulled wool. The Senators from the honey, tung nuts and pulled-wool States were easily made to see how vital it was for these commodities to be subsidized by the taxpayer. Honey, tung nuts and pulled wool went into Senator Anderson's bill. And Senator Anderson's bill passed instead of Secretary Brannan's.

Behind all the present clamor for and against the Brannan farm plan, the same sort of process operates on a much larger scale. The principles of the Brannan plan are very simple.

Instead of the present disguised subsidies, farmers are to be paid on open subsidies in the form of "production payments," whenever crop prices fall too low. Instead of being stored, or even destroyed, the subsidized farm products are to be sold on the open market for what they will bring, and eaten by the taxpayers. And because profits will thus be guaranteed to farmers, much more effective Government controls are to be imposed on acreages planted.

IT IS NOT the purpose here to say whether the Brannan plan is, or is not a good plan. What needs to be pointed out, rather, is the extreme hypocrisy that pervades the whole debate about this great issue.

The American Farm Bureau, for instance, bitterly denounces the plan as socialistic. But the Farm Bureau is led by Allan B. Kline, who was spotted for Secretary of Agriculture in the Dewey Administration. The Farm Bureau is also controlled by large farmers. And one of the original Brannan plan's best features was a clause aimed at the present shocking situation, in which large farmers are given enormous annual presents by the American Treasury.

When the potato support-price mess was at its worst, for instance, more than one "farmer" in Aroostook County, Maine, was getting above $500,000 annually from the Government for his factory-farmed crop. Such "farmers" made profits of $250,000 a year or more. To end this nonsense, Brannan proposed to put a ceiling value of $25,000 on the crops that would be eligible for subsidy from any one farm. This was socialism, and aroused natural indignation.

The other really impelling objection to the Brannan Plan is the increase of Government controls over farmers. But even the most conservative Republicans in Congress now accept the rule that our farmers must be guaranteed profits. If the farmers are to be guaranteed profits, but not controlled, the temptation will be irresistible to increase output until there is a hopeless glut of every crop, and the whole system collapses in chaos. In short, firm farm controls are the essential price of guaranteed farm profits. And if controls are to be honestly attacked, subsidies must be attacked, too.

FROM ALL THIS a conclusion perhaps arises. The real danger of state planning in the American society lies less in the fallibility of the planners, than in the power of special interests in the Congress, and in the widespread belief that you can have your cake and eat it, too.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Soviets And The Senators

SINCE the Senators who visited General MacArthur and the Generalissimo opened up their campaign, events of great consequence have taken place in the Far East. All of them point, I think, to the same conclusion: that the immediate and paramount objective of Soviet policy is to isolate China from the non-Communist world.

Lippmann

If this can be done, China will lie exclusively within the Soviet orbit. The supremacy of the Kremlin in Peiping will be assured. Then the Russian penetration of north China and the Cominform's domination of Asiatic communism will not be interfered with,—except as the Chinese themselves may be driven to resist and to rebel.

SOVIET diplomacy is acting with great shrewdness. The first phase has had to do with recognition, and the tactic employed has been, first, to encourage India, Pakistan and Britain to recognize Red China by treating them reasonably well in China; and, second, to prevent American recognition by stirring up incidents and to prevent French recognition by entering into relations with Ho-Chi-Minh with whom France is at war in Indo-China. The advantages of this diplomatic maneuver are manysided. It divides the non-Communist powers, and since they cannot have a common policy in China, it prevents each of them from having any policy in China.

But not only that. As India and Pakistan enter into normal diplomatic relations with China, the Chinese will not feel that they are morally isolated from the other peoples of Asia. The recognition of the Indonesian Republic, which has just taken place, will strengthen this feeling. On the other hand, in the eyes of the peoples of Asia, France is the last of the Western imperial powers still resisting native independence by force of arms. The United States, still entangled with Chiang, is—alas—identified with everything that the great mass of the Chinese people have turned against. And so, the longer France can be kept embroiled in Indo-China and the United States entangled with Chiang in Formosa, the longer will Moscow have a free hand in China.

The isolation of China, the failure to admit her into the world community of the United Nations, will then be attributed to French imperialism, so much less enlightened than the British or the Dutch, and to American support of the reactionary forces, which Chiang's carpetbaggers represent.

THE RUSSIANS have played their game very cleverly. They have made France and the United States accomplish for them what they themselves most wanted to have accomplished: namely the isolation of China. Nothing suits the Kremlin better than to keep France preoccupied and in trouble in Indo-China, and the United States preoccupied and divided and diplomatically paralyzed over Formosa and the debris of the Chiang regime.

The event which, it seems to me, clinched the argument was the prompt and violent reaction of M. Vishinsky to Secretary Acheson's Press Club speech. American critics of the speech have discounted its importance on the ground that it was mere wishful thinking to talk about a Chinese-Russian conflict in Manchuria and in the borderland. They have also said that the Secretary's words would never get through the iron curtain and could not, therefore, have any influence.

But M. Vishinsky would hardly have replied so publicly and so angrily if Mr. Acheson's charges had had no effect. Nor would he have advertised those charges if they had never been heard before. M. Vishinsky has not shown any such concern about Formosa. But when Mr. Acheson, after the President had renounced Formosa, moved diplomatically into the interior of China, M. Vishinsky was really aroused. For if America was going to get rid of Chiang, was not going to wage an undeclared war against China, and was going to resume its historic role as the champion of Chinese independence and integrity, then the Russian diplomatic policy was seriously threatened.

M. Vishinsky had to act and not merely to issue his angry disclaimer. His action was to induce Red China to intervene in Indo-China by recognizing Ho-Chi-Minh and thus to open an irreparable quarrel with the French Government. This prevented the French recognition of Red China. It automatically prevented the admission of Red China into the United Nations, an event which would have established diplomatic relations indirectly between Red China and the United States. At the same time it diverted attention from northern China, where the decisive issues lie, and to the far south where nothing effective or decisive for the Far East can be done.

WHAT THE well-intentioned but inexperienced Senators like Mr. Knowland and Mr. Smith of New Jersey have not, I believe, grasped is that the net result of their agitation is to paralyze American and non-Soviet diplomacy in the Far East. They think they are men of action, prepared to act boldly. But in fact they are, quite unwittingly of course, running interference for Soviet diplomacy.

Nothing can suit the Kremlin better than that the non-Soviet powers should be divided, that all the Americans should withdraw from China, that America should spend its energies on Formosa rather than on Manchuria, that America should be identified with Chiang and all the symbols of corruption and extortion and reaction, that Congress and the Administration should remain in an angry deadlock in the whole field of foreign policy, that Mr. Acheson and the State Department should spend hours and hours, days and days, thinking about how to answer Mr. Knowland rather than about what to do next about Stalin.

Seminar Opens Here Tuesday On U. S. Food Aid to World

Forty farmers from 18 States will meet here Tuesday for a 10-day study of "What Could and Should American Agriculture Do for a Hungry World?"

The seminar, to be held at the Department of Agriculture, will be under the auspices of two Quaker organizations, the Friends Committee on National Legislation and the American Friends Service Committee.

The delegates, made up of representatives of most prominent Protestant denominations, want to find out how America's unprecedented food surpluses may be used to meet critical world food needs. Long-range, world-wide planning for food production and distribution will be a second major concern.

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan will be the first of a list of prominent officials to appear before the group. Brannan will speak at the opening Tuesday.

Later the program will include Sir Herbert Broadley, Deputy Director General of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization; Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), Republican leader on the Senate Agriculture Committee; Representative Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee; and Willard Thorpe, assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs.

"We intend to explore what we can and should do for a hungry world," Raymond Wilson, secretary of the Friends Committee on National Legislation said.

"During the war we gave our sons and unstintingly of our time and money. Now one of the most urgent problems of peace is the paradox of plenty here and hunger elsewhere."

Unless Christians are willing to grapple with these problems, Wilson continued, "their traditional commitment to feeding the hungry becomes nothing more than a pleasant idea."

The delegates will come at their own expense, Wilson pointed out. During the 10 days they will have time to discuss problems such as price supports, production controls, tariffs, world competition for markets, and world organizations such at FAO and the International Trade Organization with members of Congress and Government agencies.

"The delegates are coming neither to sell a bill of goods nor to be sold one," Wilson said. "Their aim is to take back to their homes an enlarged comprehension of world food problems."

Aga Khan, Age 72, Is 'Shocked' To See People in India So Thin

New Delhi, India, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—The fabulously wealthy Aga Kahn today announced that from now on he will spend the millions showered on him by his followers for research to better life in Indna.

The 72-year-old spiritual leader of Ismaeli Moslems, who has lavished money on three wives, race horses, automobiles and jewels, was aghast at the poverty he has found in India on this trip—"much worse than four years ago," he said.

Suffering a slight head cold, the Aga Kahn received newsmen in the bedroom of his luxurious hotel suite, where he made these other pronouncements:

1. The United States should make "unlimited" hydrogen bombs anld establish a 70-group Air Force.

2. His daughter-in-law, Rita Hayworth, will resume her Hollywood career "within a few months."

Th+ 225-pound Aga declared he probably will get $1,890,000 worth of platinum when his followers present him with his weight in the precious metal in 1954.

"It will go for research, especially in the field of nut-ition, and for education—to teach people how to get more value out of food," he said.

He said he and his third wife, the Begum, were "shocked to see how thin the people of India are."

The Aga Khan will be given his weight in platinum in identical ceremonies in 1954 in Bombay, Karachi and Nairobi. He was weighed in diamonds four years ago.

Monday, accompanied by the Begum, his doctor, two valets, his secretary, a cook, the Begum's maid and two friends, he will fly to Agra in a chartered plane. Later he will spend two weeks in Karachi and two weeks in Cairo.

Demaret's 269 Wins Title as Snead Misses Putt

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THAT GREAT NEWS gathering organization, the Associated Press, reports that Jack Dempsey was the greatest fighter of the half century. If that fact does not quite qualify as news, it is nevertheless interesting. A national poll of sports writers and broadcasters elevates Dempsey to the No. 1 spot over Joe Louis.

The temptation is to take it from there and speculate what might have happened had Louis and Dempsey been cast into the same era instead of attaining their peaks 20 years apart. Only one thing is certain—their fight would have been a beaut. Less certain, but quite probable, is the belief that Dempsey would have walked out the winner.

POVICH

In Louis' corner you'd have seen the deadliest puncher in the history of the heavyweight ranks — the man who could numb you with one knuckle-packed bomb—but against Dempsey he'd have been in there with the fighter who could take a punch better than any other.

And only a Louis could have out-punched Dempsey who could also tear a fellow's head off, but not with quite the same dispatch as Louis. It is significant that they were both exponents of the most destructive kind of punch in the fight business—the left hook.

UNLIKE DEMPSEY'S iron-tough chin, there was a chink in Louis' armor, though, and it was doubtless the biggest factor in the poll's reluctance to rank him No. 1 despite the fact that he won more fights. Louis was on the seat of his own pants too many times and there must be the suspicion that he couldn't take a punch to the chin with any of the aplomb of the old Mauler.

Aging Jimmy Braddock, never known as a hefty hitter, had Louis down from an uppercut before yielding his title to Joe. And before that, Max Schmeling floored him five times before knocking him out. Even as a champion, though never beaten, Louis was dumped on the floor once by such as Buddy Baer and Tony Galento, and three times the venerable Joe Walcott had him down in their two fights.

And one night in New York, Tami Mauriello tagged Louis in the first round and it appeared as if a new champion was in the making. Panic was all over Joe's face, and only his recuperative powers brought him back to the battle. Squared away once more, Louis knocked Mauriello out in the same round with a punch that ranked as one of the most explosive of all time, second only perhaps to the straight right hand with which he once knocked Lou Nova out.

DEMPSEY'S RECORD shows only two knockdowns, and one of those was in 1917 when he was stopped by Fireman Jim Flynn in the days when he was an unknown. In 1923, Luis Firpo knocked Dempsey through the ropes at the Polo Grounds, but it wasn't Dempsey's chin that buckled. He was simply knocked off his feet by a ponderous push. Dempsey was also down on one knee in the eighth round of the second Tunney fight but Tunney just grazed him with a right. Dempsey missed a wild right and then slipped to the canvas but was up without a count.

When Dempsey did yield the title to Gene Tunney in the Philadelphia upset in 1926, the Dempsey chin was no factor. Tunney simply outpointed an aging, supine Dempsey who was clearly through. In his training camp before that fight, it was obvious that he was old and rusty, what with Tommy Loughran, a light-heavyweight, exposing him as slow with the old tiger spring gone from all of his limbs.

If the A.P. erred in its poll, it was in referring to Dempsey's fight with Jack Sharkey, between the two Tunney fights, as a "warmup." Dempsey won that one, but it was anything but a warmup. He took an unconscionable beating from Sharkey for six rounds, and was hit by everything save the ringposts, and it was a pathetic spectacle. He wasn't in distress, he simply was losing every round. And then in the seventh he stopped Sharkey with the only punch he aimed at the sailor's chin all night—a crushing left hook.

GENE TUNNEY was rated third among the heavyweights of the last 50 years, and there could be some quarrel with that ranking. Save for his two victories over the back-slid Dempsey, Tunney had the least impressive record of any champion in those years. He defended his title only twice, and the last time was against a hand-picked trial horse, Tom Heeney.

But in one respect, Tunney qualified for a superlative. He was the most sharp-shooting puncher of them all. He punched to spots and could achieve more blood-letting at the first sign of an opponent's cut than any other. He was no numbing puncher, but he specialized nicely in a solid right hand to the heart that could hurt more than was visible.

Tunney could take it, too, and he might have beaten such as Louis by his ability to maneuver a man in and out of position. But the most reasonable belief is that Louis would have caught up with Tunney somewhere within 10 rounds and hurt him with that streaking left hook, probably knockout. That's just an idea. Suppose you take it from here.

Ready to Replace Millegan

Hamilton Declines Comment As Club Suggests He Quit

Pittsburgh, Jan. 29 (AP).—Pitt Athletic Director Tom Hamilton tonight declined comment on the suggestion of the Pitt club of Harrisburg (Pa.) that he resign.

The Harrisburg club took exception to the events surrounding Mike Milligan's turning down a one-year contract as football coach at the University of Pittsburgh.

The club wired Hamilton:

"You can cease looking for any cooperation from the Harrisburg Pitt club. We would suggest that for the good of the University of Pittsburgh, its many alumni and friends that you resign."

Milligan's three-year contract at Pitt expires February 17. He turned down Pitt's offer of a new contract on a year-to-year basis.

"Milligan didn't see fit to accept the contract, so that's that," was Hamilton's only comment.

Hamilton said a batch of applications from prospective coaches had started coming in and that Pitt "Hopes to move as rapidly as possible" in naming a successor to Milligan.

Spring football drills are slated to start in mid-March.

Names mentioned in connection with the Pitt job include those of Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma and Don Faurot of Missouri and Dr. Eddie Baker of Carnegie Tech.

Polly Riley Wins Over Marlene for Title, 4 and 3

By James F. Fowler

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Polly Riley won her second major golf tournament in as many weeks today by defeating Marlene Bauer, 4 and 3, in the gruelling 36-hole finals of the Helen Lee Doherty Women's Amateur golf tournament.

Miss Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., closed out the match on the thirty-third hole with an 18-inch putt for a par three. She had led the 15-year-old Midland, Tex., sensation 2 up at the end of the first 18 holes.

Miss Riley, who last week won the Tampa Women's Open golf tournament, was forced to come from behind in the morning round but after never relinquished her advantage.

It was Polly's putter that spelled the difference between the two Texans. Her fine iron shots—particularly the long irons—set up most of her superiority.

Polly carded a sizzling men's par 72 in the morning round against Marlene's 75. Both were out in even women's par 38. Polly was two under men's par 34 coming back and Marlene carded a 37.

5000 Watch Match

Polly had trouble twice on the front nine during the afternoon round and played the first nine in 40 while Marlene again shot a 38.

They halved the first four holes in the afternoon round, then Polly took a six on the par four fifth hole and Marlene holed out in even par to trim Miss Riley's lead to one-up.

But Miss Riley took the next hole by dropping an 8-foot putt for a par three and Marlene was down in four.

Again Marlene trimmed Miss Riley's lead to one-up when Polly had the worst hole of the day. Her second shot hita spectator. She flubbed her third shot and the fourth went over the green. Then she three-putted for a seven. Marlene went down in even par five.

They halved the eighth and Polly won the ninth to turn two-up. They halved the tenth, then Miss Riley went three up on the eleventh when she dropped her tee shot on the 164-yard par three hole less than six feet from the cup and canned it for a birdie two.

They halved the twelfth with par fours and the thirteenth with birdie threes. They halved the fourteenth with par fours.

On the final hole, the 212-yard par three fifteenth, Polly's tee shot was 25 feet from the cup on the green. Marlene was 60 feet short of the green and her approach shot went 18 feet bewond the cup. Polly two-putted for par. Marlene also two-putted for a four and the match was over.

John Mahnken Goes to Celtics

Boston, Jan. 29 (AP).—Boston's Celtics today asked National Basketball Association waivers on former Holy Cross star Dermie O'Connell and also made a deal with the TRI City Club.

The Celtics swapped Center Gene Englund to Red Averkaen's Tri-City Club for Big John Mahnken.

Englund recently joined the Celtics, who are fighting for a playoff spot in the league's Eastern division. He came here from Fort Wayne.

Mahnken could be the big man the Celtics need around the basket. He is 6-8 and weighs 245.

This will be the sixth club the former Georgetown star has played with in the four years of the big pro basketball circuit. He formerly was with Washington, Baltimore, Fort Wayne and Indianapolic before joining Tri Cities.

O'Connell is the second Holy Cross star the Celtics placed on waivers. Joe Mullaney was waived on by all other clubs, and his name now is on the celtics' negotiation list.

They and George Kaftan, a starting forward for the Celtics, were members of the Holy Cross National Championship team of 1946-1947.

Nats Open Here With A's April 18

The Nats, who usually wait until May at least before playing at night, start much earlier this year.

They'll play the first of their 43 night games—largest number in the American League—on April 19, one day after they open the season at home with the Philadelphia Athletics.

The 43-night game schedule also lists five Saturday night games at Griffith Stadium.

The other seven American League teams also open their seasons on April 18, the day the Nats get started at Griffith Stadium aaginst the A's. In alternate years, the Nats open their season a day earlier than the rest of the teams.

The 154-game schedule, announced yesterday by American League President Will Harridge in Chicago, also gives the Nats two holiday doubleheader dates at home.

Play Here July 4

On July 4, they are host to the New York Yankees, and on Labor Day, they entertain the Boston Red Sox.

Washington's traditional opener with its presidential pegging of the first ball will coincide with the full scale league start.

St. Louis appears at Chicago, Detroit at Cleveland and New York at Boston on April 18, same days as the Nats-A's opener at Griffith Stadium.

The 5½-month season closes October 1.

The night game card includes two more games under the arc-lights than the 202 scheduled last year. However, only 193 were able to be played in 1949.

14 at Night for Yanks

New York, Boston and Detroit again have restricted their night activity at home to 14 games.

Two other teams, St. Louis with 38 and Cleveland with 29, have two more night games this season, while Philadelphia matches last year's number, 32, and Chicago has dropped two to 20.

The 154-game slate for each club includes four "trippers," swings from home, during the season.

Terps' Quattrocchi Called 'Well-Behaved Graziano'

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

FASTEN YOUR seat belt, Mac, this may jar you—it's a story about about a Marine with a kind word for a sailor.

Former Leatherneck Col. Heinie Miller thinks former Sailor Andy Quattrocchi is "simply terrific."

QUATTROCCHI

Former Marine Miller's praise for former Sailor Quattrocchi is no pitch toward helping the armed forces unification program. Nothing at all like that.

Quattrocchi, bushy-haired New Yorker with a pair of anvil fists, is the star of Miller's Maryland University boxing team. He was a "holdout" last year, refusing to box when free room and board was refused him.

Made to see the light and work for his keep, Quattrocchi returned to the fighting business Saturday and salted away his opponent from the Citadel in 1:56 of the first round.

"He's a well-behaved Rocky Graziano," said Miller, of his power-punching 130-pounder. "He's got what all good fighters have—a fighting heart and a great temper. He gets madder than hell when he's hit hard. He loses his temper, but not his control. He's a sweetheart."

The silent, somewhat sullen 23-year-old junior is a graduate of New York's Police Athletic League.

"Had a few scraps when I was a kid back home, but those were all until I joined the Marines," is about all he'll say about himself.

Titone Fights Here Tonight

Interest in tonight's boxing card at Turner's Arena will be split between two featherweight bouts.

Danny Carabella of New York meets Brooklyn's Charlie Titone in the 10-round main event while local whiz Gene Smith, with four straight wins since turning pro, takes on New York's George Wright in a special six-rounder.

Carabella, who boasts a string of 13 straight wins including a decision over the British Empire champion, Ronnie Clayton, will be making his local debut after a very successful foreign tour.

Carabella is an extremely fast puncher using a whirlwind style of attack.

Titone, on the other hand, is better known locally, having fought Jimmy Cooper three times here, losing, winning by a knockout and finally getting a draw in their last outing. Since then the Brooklynite has decisioned Little Dynamite here.

Arnold Curry, McKeesport, Pa., boxes Chink Williams in a five and Al Wright takes on Kid Wolfe in another five-rounder. Four-rounders pit Ape Kaiser against Cy Redmond and Tommy Rupert meets Frank Ball.

Evashevski Named Coach

Seattle, Jan. 29 (AP).—Forest Evashevski, assistant at Michigan State College, has been named head coach at Washington State College, the Associated Press learned tonight.

Evashevski was given a five-year contract at an annual salary in excess of $10,000.

He will succed Phil Sarboe, the W. S. C. alumnus who resigned at the close of last season. Evashevski is a University of Michigan graduate and won fame in college as blocking back and field general in the immediate pre-war era. He was a teammate of Tommy Harmon, one of Michigan's all-time grid greats.

The hiring of Evashevski means a return of single-wing football to Washington State, a system featured by Sarboe's predecessor ,Orin E. (Babe) Hollingbery.

31 for Mikan

Minneapolis Runs Over Caps, 88-60

Minneapolis, Jan. 29—George Mikan and the Minneapolis Lakers interrupted a string of three straight road triumphs for the Washington Capitols here tonight before a 7401 crowd, 88-60.

Mikan tallied 31 points as the Lakers extended their domination over the Caps to five games this season, meantime running their own home-floor record to 16 in a row.

Fred Scolari, with 13 points, was the Caps' hot shot, but that wasn't very hot, and as a result Washington trailed by a mile after a third-quarter Laker splurge.

Nichols Returns

Jack Nichols, making his first appearance after spraining his ankle at Tri-Cities, tallied only one bucket in about 15 minutes of play.

The Caps led, 17-13, at the end of the quarter, but by half-time the Lakers had run up a 39-33 command.

Washington played the whole first half without substitution, and then put a completely new five in to start the second half.

That put Nichols on Mikan, and Jack blanked George without a point for 7½ minutes. Yet the Caps couldn't do much offensively, and it was 52-39 before they substituted. McKinney and Halbert hit, but with Nichols those were the only three Washington buckets of the period. It ended 62-43.

Takes Lead by 30 Points

That 19-point margin fluctuated in the fourth period, and hit 71-49 before Scolari's free throw put Washington at the 50 mark.

It became more of a rout every minute and when Mikan went out the margin was 24 points. But that didn't even stem the Laker splurge, and it was 82-52 before Katkaveck finally looped a long one. But that was all.

Everybody Scores As Syracuse Wins

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. (AP).—Leading from the first period, the Syracuse Nationals scored their thirty-second victory in 39 National Basketball Association games as they romped to an 85 to 70 win over Sheboygan tonight.

Adolph Schayes led the Syracuse scoring with 21 points as Coach Al Cervi substituted freely and every man on his squad got into the scoring column. Max Morris led the visitors with 14 points while Hack Burmaster netted 13.

Billy Gabor, playing despite a fractured jaw, was used sparingly after the first period and netted three points, all on free throws.

Cranston Gets 22 As Colesville Wins

Scotty Cranston set a scoring record for the Montgomery County Parks Basketball League when he tossed in 22 points to pace Colesville to a 49-42 win over Silver Spring A. A. last night.

In other games, Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad nosed out GPO in an overtime struggle, 45-42; Toms Auto kept pace with Colesville on top of the league standings by downing Kensington, 48-34; VFW routed Ig-Nor, 53-36, and the Elks dumped Myron Cowell out of the first place tie by shellacking Cowell, 55-33.

Skater Falls, Gets Up to Win Race

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 29 (AP).—Ken Bartholomew of Minneapolis got up after falling in a qualifying heat and went on to win his fifth men's senior national speedskating championship today.

Bartholomew fell in qualifying for the one-mile event, but scrambled to his feet and overcame a half-lap handicap to qualify for the final. He placed third in the final for 10 points he needed to win over Ray Blum of Nutley, N. J., the defending champion.

Sam Fires 66, Beaten By Stroke On Last Hole

By J. k Stevenson

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 29 (AP).—Jimmy Demaret fired his fourth straight round of sub-par golf here today to win the $10,000 Ben Hogan Open tournament with a score of 269 after Sam Snead missed an 8-foot putt that would have tied the count.

It marked the first tournament victory for jolly Jimmy since he won the 1949 Phoenix Open in a playoff with Ben Hogan.

Demaret, the leader throughout the four days of play, shot a two-under-par 69 today despite continuous rain.

Snead, who was five under par at the turn, couldn't hold the pace. He finished with a 66 and a second place 270.

Hogan Has 283

"It was a tough struggle right down to the last hole," said Demaret as he walked off the eighteenth green to take the $2000 winner's check.

Jimmy, who plays out of Ojai, Calif., found himself in trouble only about 75 yards from that final hole. His second shot came to rest alongside a small tree and under corn stalk wrappings protecting the trunk. After a quick rule interpretation, the stalks were cut away without moving the ball or losing a stroke. Jimmy hit to the green. His first putt stopped 2 inches from the cup. He had his par five and the match.

Bob Goldwater, chairman of the tournament for the Thunderbirds of the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce, made the ruling. It brought squawks from some by-standing pros but stood nevertheless.

Hogan, in whose honor the tournament was named, again couldn't get under par. He shot a 72 and finished far down the list with a 283—just in the money. He won $16.66.

Ellsworth Vines, Chicago, whose father died in Seattle, Wash., after the tournament had started here, went one over par today, finishing in third place with 274.

Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., was even par with 71 today. That was good enough for 275 and fourth money.

Despite the rain which fell after three days of sunny weather, Snead, 1949's golfer of the year from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., found his long putts dropping on the first nine but on the second missed a couple which could have changed the complexion fo the match. On the eleventh he missed a 10-footer. Then the one on the eighteenth wouldn't drop despite Sam taking plenty of time lining it up.

Demaret made the turn at nine holes till in the lead by two strokes although Snead had closed the gap by two. Jimmy fell off and went one over par on each of the next two holes. On the twelfth, his first putt rolled completely around the hole before dropping in for a birdie. That probably marked the turning point in the match.

Snead Still Top Earner

Snead, who still remains the year's leading money winner with $4158, came up to the 540-yard eighteenth hole with a good chance of winding up six under par. His second shot stopped only a few feet from the green. His approach then rolled 8 feet past, and he missed the putt.

Demaret's 269 Wins Title as Snead Misses Putt

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THAT GREAT NEWS gathering organization, the Associated Press, reports that Jack Dempsey was the greatest fighter of the half century. If that fact does not quite qualify as news, it is nevertheless interesting. A national poll of sports writers and broadcasters elevates Dempsey to the No. 1 spot over Joe Louis.

The temptation is to take it from there and speculate what might have happened had Louis and Dempsey been cast into the same era instead of attaining their peaks 20 years apart. Only one thing is certain—their fight would have been a beaut. Less certain, but quite probable, is the belief that Dempsey would have walked out the winner.

POVICH

In Louis' corner you'd have seen the deadliest puncher in the history of the heavyweight ranks — the man who could numb you with one knuckle-packed bomb—but against Dempsey he'd have been in there with the fighter who could take a punch better than any other.

And only a Louis could have out-punched Dempsey who could also tear a fellow's head off, but not with quite the same dispatch as Louis. It is significant that they were both exponents of the most destructive kind of punch in the fight business—the left hook.

UNLIKE DEMPSEY'S iron-tough chin, there was a chink in Louis' armor, though, and it was doubtless the biggest factor in the poll's reluctance to rank him No. 1 despite the fact that he won more fights. Louis was on the seat of his own pants too many times and there must be the suspicion that he couldn't take a punch to the chin with any of the aplomb of the old Mauler.

Aging Jimmy Braddock, never known as a hefty hitter, had Louis down from an uppercut before yielding his title to Joe. And before that, Max Schmeling floored him five times before knocking him out. Even as a champion, though never beaten, Louis was dumped on the floor once by such as Buddy Baer and Tony Galento, and three times the venerable Joe Walcott had him down in their two fights.

And one night in New York, Tami Mauriello tagged Louis in the first round and it appeared as if a new champion was in the making. Panic was all over Joe's face, and only his recuperative powers brought him back to the battle. Squared away once more, Louis knocked Mauriello out in the same round with a punch that ranked as one of the most explosive of all time, second only perhaps to the straight right hand with which he once knocked Lou Nova out.

DEMPSEY'S RECORD shows only two knockdowns, and one of those was in 1917 when he was stopped by Fireman Jim Flynn in the days when he was an unknown. In 1923, Luis Firpo knocked Dempsey through the ropes at the Polo Grounds, but it wasn't Dempsey's chin that buckled. He was simply knocked off his feet by a ponderous push. Dempsey was also down on one knee in the eighth round of the second Tunney fight but Tunney just grazed him with a right. Dempsey missed a wild right and then slipped to the canvas but was up without a count.

When Dempsey did yield the title to Gene Tunney in the Philadelphia upset in 1926, the Dempsey chin was no factor. Tunney simply outpointed an aging, supine Dempsey who was clearly through. In his training camp before that fight, it was obvious that he was old and rusty, what with Tommy Loughran, a light-heavyweight, exposing him as slow with the old tiger spring gone from all of his limbs.

If the A.P. erred in its poll, it was in referring to Dempsey's fight with Jack Sharkey, between the two Tunney fights, as a "warmup." Dempsey won that one, but it was anything but a warmup. He took an unconscionable beating from Sharkey for six rounds, and was hit by everything save the ringposts, and it was a pathetic spectacle. He wasn't in distress, he simply was losing every round. And then in the seventh he stopped Sharkey with the only punch he aimed at the sailor's chin all night—a crushing left hook.

GENE TUNNEY was rated third among the heavyweights of the last 50 years, and there could be some quarrel with that ranking. Save for his two victories over the back-slid Dempsey, Tunney had the least impressive record of any champion in those years. He defended his title only twice, and the last time was against a hand-picked trial horse, Tom Heeney.

But in one respect, Tunney qualified for a superlative. He was the most sharp-shooting puncher of them all. He punched to spots and could achieve more blood-letting at the first sign of an opponent's cut than any other. He was no numbing puncher, but he specialized nicely in a solid right hand to the heart that could hurt more than was visible.

Tunney could take it, too, and he might have beaten such as Louis by his ability to maneuver a man in and out of position. But the most reasonable belief is that Louis would have caught up with Tunney somewhere within 10 rounds and hurt him with that streaking left hook, probably knockout. That's just an idea. Suppose you take it from here.

Ready to Replace Millegan

Hamilton Declines Comment As Club Suggests He Quit

Pittsburgh, Jan. 29 (AP).—Pitt Athletic Director Tom Hamilton tonight declined comment on the suggestion of the Pitt club of Harrisburg (Pa.) that he resign.

The Harrisburg club took exception to the events surrounding Mike Milligan's turning down a one-year contract as football coach at the University of Pittsburgh.

The club wired Hamilton:

"You can cease looking for any cooperation from the Harrisburg Pitt club. We would suggest that for the good of the University of Pittsburgh, its many alumni and friends that you resign."

Milligan's three-year contract at Pitt expires February 17. He turned down Pitt's offer of a new contract on a year-to-year basis.

"Milligan didn't see fit to accept the contract, so that's that," was Hamilton's only comment.

Hamilton said a batch of applications from prospective coaches had started coming in and that Pitt "Hopes to move as rapidly as possible" in naming a successor to Milligan.

Spring football drills are slated to start in mid-March.

Names mentioned in connection with the Pitt job include those of Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma and Don Faurot of Missouri and Dr. Eddie Baker of Carnegie Tech.

Polly Riley Wins Over Marlene for Title, 4 and 3

By James F. Fowler

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Polly Riley won her second major golf tournament in as many weeks today by defeating Marlene Bauer, 4 and 3, in the gruelling 36-hole finals of the Helen Lee Doherty Women's Amateur golf tournament.

Miss Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., closed out the match on the thirty-third hole with an 18-inch putt for a par three. She had led the 15-year-old Midland, Tex., sensation 2 up at the end of the first 18 holes.

Miss Riley, who last week won the Tampa Women's Open golf tournament, was forced to come from behind in the morning round but after never relinquished her advantage.

It was Polly's putter that spelled the difference between the two Texans. Her fine iron shots—particularly the long irons—set up most of her superiority.

Polly carded a sizzling men's par 72 in the morning round against Marlene's 75. Both were out in even women's par 38. Polly was two under men's par 34 coming back and Marlene carded a 37.

5000 Watch Match

Polly had trouble twice on the front nine during the afternoon round and played the first nine in 40 while Marlene again shot a 38.

They halved the first four holes in the afternoon round, then Polly took a six on the par four fifth hole and Marlene holed out in even par to trim Miss Riley's lead to one-up.

But Miss Riley took the next hole by dropping an 8-foot putt for a par three and Marlene was down in four.

Again Marlene trimmed Miss Riley's lead to one-up when Polly had the worst hole of the day. Her second shot hita spectator. She flubbed her third shot and the fourth went over the green. Then she three-putted for a seven. Marlene went down in even par five.

They halved the eighth and Polly won the ninth to turn two-up. They halved the tenth, then Miss Riley went three up on the eleventh when she dropped her tee shot on the 164-yard par three hole less than six feet from the cup and canned it for a birdie two.

They halved the twelfth with par fours and the thirteenth with birdie threes. They halved the fourteenth with par fours.

On the final hole, the 212-yard par three fifteenth, Polly's tee shot was 25 feet from the cup on the green. Marlene was 60 feet short of the green and her approach shot went 18 feet bewond the cup. Polly two-putted for par. Marlene also two-putted for a four and the match was over.

John Mahnken Goes to Celtics

Boston, Jan. 29 (AP).—Boston's Celtics today asked National Basketball Association waivers on former Holy Cross star Dermie O'Connell and also made a deal with the TRI City Club.

The Celtics swapped Center Gene Englund to Red Averkaen's Tri-City Club for Big John Mahnken.

Englund recently joined the Celtics, who are fighting for a playoff spot in the league's Eastern division. He came here from Fort Wayne.

Mahnken could be the big man the Celtics need around the basket. He is 6-8 and weighs 245.

This will be the sixth club the former Georgetown star has played with in the four years of the big pro basketball circuit. He formerly was with Washington, Baltimore, Fort Wayne and Indianapolic before joining Tri Cities.

O'Connell is the second Holy Cross star the Celtics placed on waivers. Joe Mullaney was waived on by all other clubs, and his name now is on the celtics' negotiation list.

They and George Kaftan, a starting forward for the Celtics, were members of the Holy Cross National Championship team of 1946-1947.

JOE JOLTS HIM—Carl W. Beatty, 14-year-old Washington youngster, got the "thrill of a lifetime" yesterday when Joe DiMaggio presented him with the "Award of the Week" in New York. Carl, who says Ted Williams is his favorite ballplayer, received a plaque, a watch and a $50 bond from the Yankee Clipper. He represented Police Boys Club No. 5 of Washington and won the honor for rescuing a girl from the path of a truck

Nats Open Here With A's April 18

The Nats, who usually wait until May at least before playing at night, start much earlier this year.

They'll play the first of their 43 night games—largest number in the American League—on April 19, one day after they open the season at home with the Philadelphia Athletics.

The 43-night game schedule also lists five Saturday night games at Griffith Stadium.

The other seven American League teams also open their seasons on April 18, the day the Nats get started at Griffith Stadium aaginst the A's. In alternate years, the Nats open their season a day earlier than the rest of the teams.

The 154-game schedule, announced yesterday by American League President Will Harridge in Chicago, also gives the Nats two holiday doubleheader dates at home.

Play Here July 4

On July 4, they are host to the New York Yankees, and on Labor Day, they entertain the Boston Red Sox.

Washington's traditional opener with its presidential pegging of the first ball will coincide with the full scale league start.

St. Louis appears at Chicago, Detroit at Cleveland and New York at Boston on April 18, same days as the Nats-A's opener at Griffith Stadium.

The 5½-month season closes October 1.

The night game card includes two more games under the arc-lights than the 202 scheduled last year. However, only 193 were able to be played in 1949.

14 at Night for Yanks

New York, Boston and Detroit again have restricted their night activity at home to 14 games.

Two other teams, St. Louis with 38 and Cleveland with 29, have two more night games this season, while Philadelphia matches last year's number, 32, and Chicago has dropped two to 20.

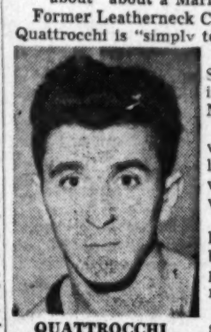
By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

FASTEN YOUR seat belt, Mac, this may jar you—it's a story about about a Marine with a kind word for a sailor.

Former Leatherneck Col. Heinie Miller thinks former Sailor Andy Quattrocchi is "simply terrific."



QUATTROCCHI

Former Marine Miller's praise for former Sailor Quattrocchi is no pitch toward helping the armed forces unification program. Nothing at all like that.

Quattrocchi, bushy-haired New Yorker with a pair of anvil fists, is the star of Miller's Maryland University boxing team. He was a "holdout" last year, refusing to box when free room and board was refused him.

Made to see the light and work for his keep, Quattrocchi returned to the fighting business Saturday and salted away his opponent from the Citadel in 1:56 of the first round.

"He's a well-behaved Rocky Graziano," said Miller, of his power-punching 130-pounder. "He's got what all good fighters have—a fighting heart and a great temper. He gets madder than hell when he's hit hard. He loses his temper, but not his control. He's a sweetheart."

The silent, somewhat sullen 23-year-old junior is a graduate of New York's Police Athletic League.

"Had a few scraps when I was a kid back home, but those were all until I joined the Marines," is about all he'll say about himself.

Titone Fights Here Tonight

Interest in tonight's boxing card at Turner's Arena will be split between two featherweight bouts.

Danny Carabella of New York meets Brooklyn's Charlie Titone in the 10-round main event while local whiz Gene Smith, with four straight wins since turning pro, takes on New York's George Wright in a special six-rounder.

Carabella, who boasts a string of 13 straight wins including a decision over the British Empire champion, Ronnie Clayton, will be making his local debut after a very successful foreign tour.

Carabella is an extremely fast puncher using a whirlwind style of attack.

Titone, on the other hand, is better known locally, having fought Jimmy Cooper three times here, losing, winning by a knockout and finally getting a draw in their last outing. Since then the Brooklynite has decisioned Little Dynamite here.

Arnold Curry, McKeesport, Pa., boxes Chink Williams in a five and Al Wright takes on Kid Wolfe in another five-rounder. Four-rounders pit Ape Kaiser against Cy Redmond and Tommy Rupert meets Frank Ball.

Evashevski Named Coach

Seattle, Jan. 29 (AP).—Forest Evashevski, assistant at Michigan State College, has been named head coach at Washington State College, the Associated Press learned tonight.

Evashevski was given a five-year contract at an annual salary in excess of $10,000.

He will succed Phil Sarboe, the W. S. C. alumnus who resigned at the close of last season. Evashevski is a University of Michigan graduate and won fame in college as blocking back and field general in the immediate pre-war era. He was a teammate of Tommy Harmon, one of Michigan's all-time grid greats.

The hiring of Evashevski means a return of single-wing football to Washington State, a system featured by Sarboe's predecessor ,Orin E. (Babe) Hollingbery.

31 for Mikan

Minneapolis Runs Over Caps, 88-60

Minneapolis, Jan. 29—George Mikan and the Minneapolis Lakers interrupted a string of three straight road triumphs for the Washington Capitols here tonight before a 7401 crowd, 88-60.

Mikan tallied 31 points as the Lakers extended their domination over the Caps to five games this season, meantime running their own home-floor record to 16 in a row.

Fred Scolari, with 13 points, was the Caps' hot shot, but that wasn't very hot, and as a result Washington trailed by a mile after a third-quarter Laker splurge.

Nichols Returns

Jack Nichols, making his first appearance after spraining his ankle at Tri-Cities, tallied only one bucket in about 15 minutes of play.

The Caps led, 17-13, at the end of the quarter, but by halftime the Lakers had run up a 39-33 command.

Washington played the whole first half without substitution, and then put a completely new five in to start the second half.

That put Nichols on Mikan, and Jack blanked George without a point for 7½ minutes. Yet the Caps couldn't do much offensively, and it was 52-39 before they substituted. McKinney and Halbert hit, but with Nichols those were the only three Washington buckets of the period. It ended 62-43.

Takes Lead by 30 Points

That 19-point margin fluctuated in the fourth period, and hit 71-49 before Scolari's free throw put Washington at the 50 mark.

It became more of a rout every minute and when Mikan went out the margin was 24 points. But that didn't even stem the Laker splurge, and it was 82-52 before Katkaveck finally looped a long one. But that was all.

Everybody Scores As Syracuse Wins

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. (AP).—Leading from the first period, the Syracuse Nationals scored their thirty-second victory in 39 National Basketball Association games as they romped to an 85 to 70 win over Sheboygan tonight.

Adolph Schayes led the Syracuse scoring with 21 points as Coach Al Cervi substituted freely and every man on his squad got into the scoring column. Max Morris led the visitors with 14 points while Hack Burmaster netted 13.

Billy Gabor, playing despite a fractured jaw, was used sparingly after the first period and netted three points, all on free throws.

Cranston Gets 22 As Colesville Wins

Scotty Cranston set a scoring record for the Montgomery County Parks Basketball League when he tossed in 22 points to pace Colesville to a 49-42 win over Silver Spring A. A. last night.

In other games, Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad nosed out GPO in an overtime struggle, 45-42; Toms Auto kept pace with Colesville on top of the league standings by downing Kensington, 48-34; VFW routed Ig-Nor, 53-36, and the Elks dumped Myron Cowell out of the first place tie by shellacking Cowell, 55-33.

Skater Falls, Gets Up to Win Race

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 29 (AP).—Ken Bartholomew of Minneapolis got up after falling in a qualifying heat and went on to win his fifth men's senior national speedskating championship today.

Bartholomew fell in qualifying for the one-mile event, but scrambled to his feet and overcame a half-lap handicap to qualify for the final. He placed third in the final for 10 points he needed to win over Ray Blum of Nutley, N. J., the defending champion.

Sam Fires 66, Beaten By Stroke On Last Hole

By J. ·k Stevenson

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 29 (AP).—Jimmy Demaret fired his fourth straight round of sub-par golf here today to win the $10,000 Ben Hogan Open tournament with a score of 269 after Sam Snead missed an 8-foot putt that would have tied the count.

It marked the first tournament victory for jolly Jimmy since he won the 1949 Phoenix Open in a playoff with Ben Hogan.

Demaret, the leader throughout the four days of play, shot a two-under-par 69 today despite continuous rain.

Hogan Has 283

"It was a tough struggle right down to the last hole," said Demaret as he walked off the eighteenth green to take the $2000 winner's check.

Jimmy, who plays out of Ojai, Calif., found himself in trouble only about 75 yards from that final hole. His second shot came to rest alongside a small tree and under corn stalk wrappings protecting the trunk. After a quick rule interpretation, the stalks were cut away without moving the ball or losing a stroke. Jimmy hit to the green. His first putt stopped 2 inches from the cup. He had his par five and the match.

Bob Goldwater, chairman of the tournament for the Thunderbirds of the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce, made the ruling. It brought squawks from some by-standing pros but stood nevertheless.

Hogan, in whose honor the tournament was named, again couldn't get under par. He shot a 72 and finished far down the list with a 283—just in the money. He won $16.66.

Ellsworth Vines, Chicago, whose father died in Seattle, Wash., after the tournament had started here, went one over par today, finishing in third place with 274.

Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., was even par with 71 today. That was good enough for 275 and fourth money.

Despite the rain which fell after three days of sunny weather, Snead, 1949's golfer of the year from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., found his long putts dropping on the first nine but on the second missed a couple which could have changed the complexion fo the match. On the eleventh he missed a 10-footer. Then the one on the eighteenth wouldn't drop despite Sam taking plenty of time lining it up.

Demaret made the turn at nine holes till in the lead by two strokes although Snead had closed the gap by two. Jimmy fell off and went one over par on each of the next two holes. On the twelfth, his first putt rolled completely around the hole before dropping in for a birdie. That probably marked the turning point in the match.

Snead Still Top Earner

Snead, who still remains the year's leading money winner with $4158, came up to the 540-yard eighteenth hole with a good chance of winding up six under par. His second shot stopped only a few feet from the green. His approach then rolled 8 feet past, and he missed the putt.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Soviets And The Senators

SINCE the Senators who visited General MacArthur and the Generalissimo opened up their campaign, events of great consequence have taken place in the Far East. All of them point, I think, to the same conclusion: that the immediate and paramount objective of Soviet policy is to isolate China from the non-Communist world.

Lippmann

If this can be done, China will lie exclusively within the Soviet orbit. The supremacy of the Kremlin in Peiping will be assured. Then the Russian penetration of north China and the Cominform's domination of Asiatic communism will not be interfered with,—except as the Chinese themselves may be driven to resist and to rebel.

SOVIET diplomacy is acting with great shrewdness. The first phase has had to do with recognition, and the tactic employed has been, first, to encourage India, Pakistan and Britain to recognize Red China by treating them reasonably well in China; and, second, to prevent American recognition by stirring up incidents and to prevent French recognition by entering into relations with Ho-Chi-Minh with whom France is at war in Indo-China. The advantages of this diplomatic maneuver are many-sided. It divides the non-Communist powers, and since they cannot have a common policy in China, it prevents each of them from having any policy in China.

But not only that. As India and Pakistan enter into normal diplomatic relations with China, the Chinese will not feel that they are morally isolated from the other peoples of Asia. The recognition of the Indonesian Republic, which has just taken place, will strengthen this feeling. On the other hand, in the eyes of the peoples of Asia, France is the last of the Western imperial powers still resisting native independence by force of arms. The United States, still entangled with Chiang, is—alas—identified with everything that the great mass of the Chinese people have turned against. And so, the longer France can be kept embroiled in Indo-China and the United States entangled with Chiang in Formosa, the longer will Moscow have a free hand in China.

The isolation of China, the failure to admit her into the world community of the United Nations, will then be attributed to French imperialism, so much less enlightened than the British or the Dutch, and to American support of the reactionary forces, which Chiang's carpetbaggers represent.

THE RUSSIANS have played their game very cleverly. They have made France and the United States accomplish for them what they themselves most wanted to have accomplished: namely the isolation of China. Nothing suits the Kremlin better than to keep France preoccupied and in trouble in Indo-China, and the United States preoccupied and divided and diplomatically paralyzed over Formosa and the debris of the Chiang regime.

The event which, it seems to me, clinched the argument was the prompt and violent reaction of M. Vishinsky to Secretary Acheson's Press Club speech. American critics of the speech have discounted its importance on the ground that it was mere wishful thinking to talk about a Chinese-Russian conflict in Manchuria and in the borderland. They have also said that the Secretary's words would never get through the iron curtain and could not, therefore, have any influence.

But M. Vishinsky would hardly have replied so publicly and so angrily if Mr. Acheson's charges had had no effect. Nor would he have advertised those charges if they had never been heard before. M. Vishinsky has not shown any such concern about Formosa. But when Mr. Acheson, after the President had renounced Formosa, moved diplomatically into the interior of China, M. Vishinsky was really aroused. For if America was going to get rid of Chiang, was not going to wage an undeclared war against China, and was going to resume its historic role as the champion of Chinese independence and integrity, then the Russian diplomatic policy was seriously threatened.

M. Vishinsky had to act and not merely to issue his angry disclaimer. His action was to induce Red China to intervene in Indo-China by recognizing Ho-Chi-Minh and thus to open an irreparable quarrel with the French Government. This prevented the French recognition of Red China. It automatically prevented the admission of Red China into the United Nations, an event which would have established diplomatic relations indirectly between Red China and the United States. At the same time it diverted attention from northern China, where the decisive issues lie, and to the far south where nothing effective or decisive for the Far East can be done.

WHAT THE well-intentioned but inexperienced Senators like Mr. Knowland and Mr. Smith of New Jersey have not, I believe, grasped is that the net result of their agitation is to paralyze American and non-Soviet diplomacy in the Far East. They think they are men of action, prepared to act boldly. But in fact they are, quite unwittingly of course, running interference for Soviet diplomacy.

Nothing can suit the Kremlin better than that the non-Soviet powers should be divided, that all the Americans should withdraw from China, that America should spend its energies on Formosa rather than on Manchuria, that America should be identified with Chiang and all the symbols of corruption and extortion and reaction, that Congress and the Administration should remain in an angry deadlock in the whole field of foreign policy, that Mr. Acheson and the State Department should spend hours and hours, days and days, thinking about how to answer Mr. Knowland rather than about what to do next about Stalin.

Seminar Opens Here Tuesday On U. S. Food Aid to World

Forty farmers from 18 States will meet here Tuesday for a 10-day study of "What Could and Should American Agriculture Do for a Hungry World?"

The seminar, to be held at the Department of Agriculture, will be under the auspices of two Quaker organizations, the Friends Committee on National Legislation and the American Friends Service Committee.

The delegates, made up of representatives of most prominent Protestant denominations, want to find out how America's unprecedented food surpluses may be used to meet critical world food needs. Long-range, world-wide planning for food production and distribution will be a second major concern.

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan will be the first of a list of prominent officials to appear before the group. Brannan will speak at the opening Tuesday.

Later the program will include Sir Herbert Broadley, Deputy Director General of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization; Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), Republican leader on the Senate Agriculture Committee; Representative Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee; and Willard Thorpe, assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs.

"We intend to explore what we can and should do for a hungry world," Raymond Wilson, secretary of the Friends Committee on National Legislation said.

"During the war we gave our sons and unstintingly of our time and money. Now one of the most urgent problems of peace is the paradox of plenty here and hunger elsewhere."

Unless Christians are willing to grapple with these problems, Wilson continued, "their traditional commitment to feeding the hungry becomes nothing more than a pleasant idea."

The delegates will come at their own expense, Wilson pointed out. During the 10 days they will have time to discuss problems such as price supports, production controls, tariffs, world competition for markets, and world organizations such at FAO and the International Trade Organization with members of Congress and Government agencies.

"The delegates are coming neither to sell a bill of goods nor to be sold one," Wilson said. "Their aim is to take back to their homes an enlarged comprehension of world food problems."

Aga Khan, Age 72, Is 'Shocked' To See People in India So Thin

New Delhi, India, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—The fabulously wealthy Aga Kahn today announced that from now on he will spend the millions showered on him by his followers for research to better life in Indna.

The 72-year-old spiritual leader of Ismaeli Moslems, who has lavished money on three wives, race horses, automobiles and jewels, was aghast at the poverty he has found in India on this trip—"much worse than four years ago," he said.

Suffering a slight head cold, the Aga Kahn received newsmen in the bedroom of his luxurious hotel suite, where he made these other pronouncements:

1. The United States should make "unlimited" hydrogen bombs and establish a 70-group Air Force.

2. His daughter-in-law, Rita Hayworth, will resume her Hollywood career "within a few months."

The 225-pound Aga declared he probably will get $1,890,000 worth of platinum when his followers present him with his weight in the precious metal in 1954.

"It will go for research, especially in the field of nutrition, and for education—to teach people how to get more value out of food," he said.

He said he and his third wife, the Begum, were "shocked to see how thin the people of India are."

The Aga Khan will be given his weight in platinum in identical ceremonies in 1954 in Bombay, Karachi and Nairobi. He was weighed in diamonds four years ago.

Monday, accompanied by the Begum, his doctor, two valets, his secretary, a cook, the Begum's maid and two friends, he will fly to Agra in a chartered plane. Later he will spend two weeks in Karachi and two weeks in Cairo.

Citation, Ponder, Two Lea, Fervent Due to Run in Anita Derby

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks:

Unless they run into some closed weather, Charles Town should have plenty of fit horses for the opening of its meeting on March 4. Several hundred thoroughbreds are stabled at the track and many have been kept in light training since the close of the December meeting. Horses are being shipped in, Pete Allnut being one of the recent arrivals with his useful string. By the way, old Chiff Chaff has left this world for whatever place honest horses go. The plater, who won many races under the banner of the Everhart family, died on a farm near Charles Town last week. Starter Harold Holland will start schooling at the West Virginia oval February 15.—BIBL.

Calumet Has Threats for All Big 'Caps

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP).—"Break up the Calumet Stable" might well be the cry today of anguished horsemen at Santa Anita.

Just as such a plea went out several years ago to break up the New York Yankee team in baseball, so could be the wail around the stable area here.

For the Calumet Stable scored a crushing one-two punch in sending Pounder and Two Lea across the line in that order in the $100,000 Santa Anita Maturity, and more of the same is due to come.

The stable probably will send two more aces, the mighty Citation and Fervent, against the field in the $50,000 San Antonio Handicap February 11, and then comes the big race of the season, the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap February 25.

Four—count 'em four Calumets are due to run in that one—Citation, Ponder, Two Lea and Fervent. It will be the largest and most powerful entry in the history of the event.

Duchess Peg Also Threat

In addition, Calumet has a strong 3-year-old filly ready for the $50,000 Santa Susana Stakes at 7 furlongs Saturday. She is Duchess Peg.

There may be a ray of hope in the $100,000 Santa Anita Derby, however. The stable's Sunlit hasn't been too impressive and the star colt, Skelter, won't try for the rich one here.

The Maturity was Calumet all the way, and tomorrow the stable, a business-like enterprise, will calmly bank $95,200.

Ponder won $75,200 of the sum, and Two Lea, his filly teammate, won $20,000 for her second.

The highly regarded Two Lea grabbed an early lead over the eight other 4-year-olds in the field, and held it until Ponder was ready to take over in the stretch.

There were some who thought Two Lea let Ponder pass by a gentleman's agrement between the stable, Eddie Arcaro on the filly, and Steve Brooks on the colt. At one point in the drive to the wire Arcaro did raise up and look back over his shoulder, perhaps to wait for Ponder. The jockeys split the fee in riding an entry such as this and the payoff is the same at the betting windows.

Mocopo Surprising Third

In any case, Ponder came on in to win by a length, and Two Lea was five lengths in front of her nearest rival, Clifford Mooers' surprising Mocopo. Trailing in order behind were Curandero, Old Rockport, Dharan, Bolero, Moonrush and Gaffery.

Mocopo won $15,000 and the King Ranch's Curandero $10,000. Ponder moved his earnings up to $404,925, tenth in the turf's all-time money winners.

The time for the mile and one quarter race was 2:02 2-5.

Rule Cited Could Make Wilt Winner

By James Abramson

New York, Jan. 29 (NYHT).—Fred Wilt and not Don Gehrmann should have been declared the winner of the photo finish 4:09.3 Wanamaker Mile in the Millrose Games Saturday night at Madison Square Garden, it was uncovered today.

If the FBI agent, feeling he had won the fastest mile of his career, lodges a protest, the local AAU registration committee, final board of appeal, must decide on the judges' own votes to reverse the announced decision.

Asa Bushnell, chief finish judge, conceiving a 2-2 deadlock among the judges, cast the deciding vote in favor of Gehrmann.

"I'm completely certain in my own mind that Gehrmann won the race," said Bushnell today.

Bushnell Rated No Vote

Bushnell, however, should have had no vote on the decision, under the AAU rules, because the three judges picking first and second gave a 2-to-1 verdict for Wilt. A 2-2 deadlock was reached because Bushnell accepted the vote of the judge picking third as an official vote on the first-place finish.

Precedent for a reversal is Eddie Conwell's winning of the National AAU 60-yard title over Billy Mathis two years ago in the Garden. In principle, the Gehrmann-Wilt case is the same.

The decision of the designated officials had been overruled illegally by the chief judge. Bushnell had refused to tell how the judges voted on the ground that he had no right to reveal it. He admitted he may have been hasty today when he confirmed the facts obtained from umpteen other sources.

John J. Downing of New York K. of C. and Maj. Patrick J. Walsh of the New York A. C., picking first, both picked Wilt. Fred Travalena, picking second, picked Wilt. That's 2 to 1 for Wilt over Gehrmann.

Graeb's Vote Irrelevant

Vic Graeb, former Columbia sprint star, picking third was asked under procedure followed by Bushnell in his own IC4A championships, for his opinion on second. He named Wilt. That made it a 2-2 deadlock.

Bushnell presented the case to the referees, Daniel J. Ferris and Albert H. Wheltle, who agreed it was Bushnell's responsibility as chief judge to resolve the deadlock.

But Graeb's tying vote was irrelevant and immaterial.

Says Rule V of the AAU Rules of Competition:

"There shall be four or more judges at the finish, one of whom shall be designated as chief judge, who shall decide the order . . . the chief judge shall only observe the finishes and his decision shall be given only in the case of a tie vote on the part of the other judges. Where there is a disagreement, if there is a majority among the other judges, the chief judge shall have no vote."

Rose Bowl Movies

Sam Fox, chairman of the Ohio State Alumni, has arranged for technicolor movies of the entire Rose Bowl football game to be shown to the public at Central High School, 4 p. m. Tuesday. The movies which include the Rose Bowl parade are an hour and a half long.

'You Took Our Money'

Columnist Hits Ohio State Alumnus' Blast at Rose Bowl

Los Angeles, Jan. 29 (AP).—Columnist Dick Hyland, former Rose Bowl performer, uncorked some verbal body blows today at the Ohio State University alumnus who said unkind things about the Pasadena grid classic.

Yesterday, Ohio State alumni Secretary Jack Fullen wrote in a school publication that the Rose Bowl affords only "cheap publicity" for the participants and is largely a mercenary venture conducted for the benefit of Pasadena businessmen.

Fullen also accused West Coast newspapermen of being a vicious," so, writing for Monday's Times, Hyland retorts:

"Was it viciousness that prompted us to say nothing in print about the pre-game brawls that went on in the Pasadena Hotel graced by the presence of a Midwestern Rose Bowl team?

"'Why,' asks Mr. Fullen, 'should the proud and powerful Western Conference . . . be a stooge for the businessmen of Pasadena?' For the same reason, Mr. Fullen, that Purdue and Indiana have had difficulty scheduling home games within your 'proud' conference. Money, Mister, mony!"

Hyland, Stanford star in the 1927 game with Alabama, concludes with:

"Bring back those swamp students and hillbillies to the Rose Bowl! They did not accept out money and hospitality and go home and say we smelled bad. I wonder how a rose smells to a pole cat, or is that being vicious?"

Around The Town

Super Service Trash and Phillips Radio moved into undisputed possession of first place in sections I and II in the Jewish Community Center senior league by winning yesterday.

Super Service defeated Pillrollers, 42-30 and Phillips trounced Ornstein's Construction, 63-45.

In other league games, Cardozo nosed out Mitchel's, 38-37. Phi Alpha edged Camatops, 50-47; the Oldtimers routed the Darkhorses, 60-41 and the Columbia Tigers beat the Ugly A.C., 52-47.

Georgetown, Del Ray Win Boys' Club Games

The Washington Boys' Club senior league demonstrated yesterday that it takes more than the game's high scorer to win in basketball. In one game Owen Cunningham registered 23 points for the Eastern Branch but Georgetown Branch won, 67-65 and in the second game, Red Brown tossed in 21 for Douglass Church only to see Del Ray win, 63-52.

Norma Thompson Paces 28-24 Win

Norma Thompson scored 20 points as St. Martin's defeated Blessed Sacrament, 28-24 in a Catholic Youth Organization Girl's Intermediate league game yesterday at St. Martin's.

In other games, Nativity beat St. Francis Xavier, 41-23; Holy Comforter defeated St. Jerome's, 30-20; and St. Dominic's beat St. Teresa's, 35-21.

Webb's 38 Points Set CYO Record

Joe Webb set a Junior Boys Catholic Youth Organization record when he scored 38 points to pace Our Lady of Lourdes to a 70-20 win over Holy Trinity yesterday.

In other league games, St. Anthony's beat St. Jerome's, 38-25; St. Gabriel's defeated St. James, 38-22; Nativity beat out Campus School, 35-31; St. Michael's beat St. Francis de Sales, 27-18; St. Martin's trounced St. Joseph's Home, 59-13; Holy Name edged Holy Comforter, 27-24; St. Joseph's routed St. Francis, 45-16; St. Ann's beat Blessed Sacrament, 44-23; Our Lady of Victory trounced St. Bernadette's, 44-10, and Sacred Heart defeated St. Thomas, 46-29.

Yanks Lose Bobsled Race

Cortina D'Ampezzo, Italy, Jan. 29 (AP).—The daring Swiss team of Fritz Feierabend and Stefan Waser rocketed to victory today in the world two-man bobsled championship races, beating out the American team of Stan Benham and Pat Martin.

Feierabend and Waser flashed its 16 treacherous curves in a total down the 1760 meter course, with time of 5 minutes, 57.73 seconds in four runs yesterday and today.

It was the fourth straight year that Switzerland has won

Benham, from Lake Placid, N. Y., and his brakeman, Martin, of Massena, N. Y., were clocked in 6 minutes, 6.11 seconds for the four runs.

St. John's Wins 15th of Year, 43-36

St. John's won its fifteenth game in 16 starts yesterday, defeating LaSalle of Cumberland, Md., 43-36 at St. John's.

An overflow crowd at the Cadets' small home court caused a rather loosely-played game and LaSalle held a 19-16 lead at intermission. But the Cadets spurted for 13 points in the third period while holding the visitors to four and coasted in.

Bobby McLindon scored five points and Bob Reese three in the third period to pace the Cadet surge. Reese led the Cadets' scoring with 11 while McLindon garnered 10.

Don, who passed the Gold Figure Skating Test earlier this month won the major event of the Middle Atlantic competitions with an outstanding performance.

His artistic jumps and sustained control throughout the difficult free skating program brought acclaim from the judges and spectators alike.

Sherry Whittenberg of Silver Spring, Md., placed third in the Junior Ladies skating behind Carol Heiss of New York and Eleanor Sonneman, unattached.

Another third place won by the District representatives went to Barbara Coteler, in the Novice Ladies' event. Shelia Muldowney of New York and Norma McCullagh of the Bronx placed 1-2.

Vera Halliday and Edward Picken, last year's Middle Atlantic senior dance champions, dropped to third this year as Jack Jost and Caryl Johns of Baltimore won the event and John Jacoby and partner from Syracuse took second.

Touchdowners Hear Russell

Harold Russell, motion picture actor and national commander of Amvets, will address the weekly Touchdown Club luncheon today. Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, will also speak.

Russell, who lost both hands in the war, received two Academy Awards for his work in "The Best Years of Our Lives." Much of his talk will center around the opportunities awaiting the disabled veterans in the postwar world.

Boxing Coach Says Quattrocchi Is a 'Well-Behaved Graziano'

But Sid Fischel, who handled Steve Mamakos and Georgie Abrams when the latter were Washington's hot shot middleweight contenders, tells you more.

Fischel, a warrant officer stationed at Quantico where Quattrocchi served as a Navy hospital corpsman, spied him in a post boxing tournament.

"I've got a kid here who belts like Maxie Baer on a good night," Fischel told Miller when he learned that Quattrocchi wanted to go to college to study physical education.

Miller talked with Andy, checked on his high school grades, found they were better than average and presto, Quattrocchi found his way to College Park and the Maryland boxing team.

ANDY'S collegiate boxing accomplishments read something like Citation's racing performances.

He's been to the post 19 times for the Terps, has flattened 15 opponents, scored two decisions and lost two split decisions. One came at the hands of Johnny Apperson of Wisconsin, in the semifinals of the National Collegiates in 1948. The other was administered by Ellerson Fowler of South Carolina, the Southern Conference's 130-pound king.

"Everybody except the judges thought the worst Andy should have gotten in either fight was a draw," commented the somewhat-partial Miller.

"He doesn't want to fight as a pro, but he's certainly got the pro attitude," Miller added. "When he tells you he'll weigh 130 for a fight, you can count on it, give or take a quarter of a pound."

THERE was nothing flukey about Andy's quick success Saturday. He was wearing 12-ounce gloves and hit Carr smack on the chin—quite an accomplishment in view of the collegiate headgear which leaves the chin and nose as practically the only unprotected portions of a fighter's face.

Is he the best college fighter Miller, who's been in boxing 50 years, has ever seen?

"I wouldn't say that, but I will say that I haven't seen any better," he answered.

Andy's pointing toward a national title this year. He'll get a preview crack at the present 130-pound titleholder, Tad Thrash, of L. S. U., February 25 when the Terps meet the Bengals down in Baton Rouge, La.

Victory Seen For Battle School Plan

Richmond, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—A joint House Appropriations and Senate Finance committee hearing will be held tomorrow on the Battle proposal for an outright grant of 45 million dollars to localities for school building.

The fate of the administration measure will be formally decided by the weekend. Insiders feel it is headed for a shoo-in victory in the General Assembly over those who think the cities and counties should match funds.

There was nothing to be gleaned from a check of Assembly members over the weekend that would indicate other than the program, except for possibly a fringe amendment or two, will pass as recommended.

First action looking toward passage of the bill will be at 9:30 a. m., when a subcommittee of the Senate Finance Committee meets to consider the amendments proposed by Senator Garland Gray carrying out the 50-50 matching recommendations made by the State Tax Study Commission he headed.

The backers of the Governor's program emphasized that they were in accord with his view that the school building situation presented an emergency. Some of them took the view that they generally would favor matching funds but regarded the present case as a well-justified exception.

Outside of Gray's amendments, the only other Senate suggestion on requiring matching funds came from Senator E. O. McCue, jr., who succeeded to Battle's seat in the upper branch. McCue doubtless will be on hand at the public hearing before the joint committees to raise his voice anew against what he called "paternalism" and "dole" on the Senate floor.

Delegate Robert Whitehead, on the House side, said he favors matching the funds and served notice early in the session that he would sound off further at the general budget hearings, the first of which is scheduled before a joint session tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Aside from the school grant bill, the Assembly faces a week of considerable tumult at hearings on such proposals as rent control, liquor by the drink and general budget recommendations.

Publishers, Printers Plan More Talks

Representatives of Washington's four newspaper publishers and AFL printers will resume negotiations this week. An agreement on wages and working conditions expired last November 11.

Officials of the printers' union, Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, and the Washington Publishers Association will meet this morning to arrange a negotiating sessions for this week, spokesmen said.

The last negotiation meeting was held on January 18.

The local union, which represents about 650 composing room employes of the four newspapers, has been seeking a pay increase of $9 a week for the day shift and the third (lobster) shift, and $14 for the night shift.

Also asked was a reduction in the third shift work week from 35 to 30 hours, and double pay for overtime, instead of time and a half. Other union proposals include a pension plan, more liberal vacations and sick leave.

The Publishers Association, has asked a reduction of $4 a week in wage rates for all shifts, as well as changes in the apprentice system, shift differentials and elimination of type duplication for advertisements.

Current wage scales, set by the expired agreement, are $91, $96 and $101 a week for the day, night and lobster shifts, respectively, for a 35-hour wook.

'Experts' Get $300,000 Loot In Gem Theft

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Daring jewel thieves last night looted the midtown apartment of a wealthy hosiery manufacturer of gems valued at $300,000. FBI agents joined police in a search for the burglars.

It was Manhattan's second major jewel robbery in 48 hours.

The new coup was pulled off in the apartment of Stanton D. Sanson, 49-year-old president of Sanson Hosiery Co. The jewelry belonged to his wife, Maxine, a former model, who was at the movies. Sanson was in Philadelphia.

Spurning near-perfect synthetic stones and less valuable gems, the smooth-working burglars looted a score of jewel boxes in the apartment and pocketed the pick of the collection. One of the stolen gems was a 70-90-carat diamond necklace.

"They took only the very large platinum and diamond pieces, settings from which the stones could be taken out and peddled very easily," Sanson said in Philadelphia.

The theft followed by 48 hours the burglary of the fashionable East Side residence of showman Billy Rose. Burglars forced their way into the Rose home Thursday night, tied up a butler and fled with gems and furs valued by Rose at $100,000.

Italian Finds Einstein in Error From Start

Rome, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Giacomo Mazzone, an Italian scientist who claims he understands Albert Einstein's new theory of gravitation, Dismissed it today with two words: "He's wrong!"

Mazzone, who has spent 45 of his 60 years attempting to disprove the theories of better known mathematicians and physicists, declared:

"Everything Einstein has ever propounded is absolutely wrong, because he tries to add too many disparate things and embraces the universe in his formulas."

The trouble both with Einstein's old theory of relativity and the new one of gravitation, Mazzone explained in an interview, is that "he equates, adds and subtracts material masses of bodies, which are measured with the common weight scales, together with the effects of electric charges, which are measured with the so-called Coulonb scale."

Senator Douglas to Speak

Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.), will address a dinner meeting of the Unitarian Laymen's League of All Souls' Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., at the church at 6:30 p. m., Thursday. He will speak on "The Next Steps for Peace."

Congressmen Urge Acheson to Clear His Stand on Hiss

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 29 (AP).—Two members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee today agreed that Secretary of State Acheson "faces nothing but trouble" until he clears up his stand in the Alger Hiss case.

They were John M. Vorys (R., Ohio) and James P. Richards (D., S. C.). They appeared on the Columbus Town Meeting Radio Forum.

After the conviction of Hiss for perjury, Acheson said that "I don't intend to turn my back on Alger Hiss."

Describing Acheson as "an old friend of mine," Vorys said:

"I intend to turn a cold shoulder on him until he explains where he stands on disloyalty in his department and on perjury and treason."

Agreeing clarification should be forthcoming, Richards said, "The least Acheson could have said was 'No comment'."

What the Heck is All this Stuff About STEAKS...STEAKS...STEAKS...STEAKS?

Now It Can Be Told! After 20 Years Of Virtual Silence, The Secret Is Out! You Owe It To Your Sense Of Well-Being To Digest Every Word Of The Absorbing Tale Below!

by Albert Parchey Mesirow

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 30; Twenty years ago this week, the great Stock Market crash was three months old. A lot of people were trying to get used to being poor again, but nobody was really scared yet . . . except me.

Frankly, I was plenty scared. I had put my life savings into stocks, and I was wondering. I wasn't "in the market," exactly, but I had certainly been marketing. And I knew that whatever happened, I could at least eat for quite awhile. My "stocks" would keep me.

You see, my "stocks" were stocks of food, spices and condiments. And the "markets" I had been frequenting were food markets. I was about to open a restaurant.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT STILL STANDS

On the fateful "opening day," I must confess, I was disappointed to find the earth still solid underfoot. No buildings toppled. No people were killed in the rush. In fact, Washington hardly took notice of my great adventure.

Next morning, I was surprised to find that I had caused no more of a ripple in the life of Washington than a pebble dropped into the broad Potomac.

People still went around wondering whether Cities Service would "come back" and if this would be a good time to buy one of those new-fangled electric refrigerators.

A few well-wishers dropped into the restaurant to say "Good Luck!" and the floral horseshoe that I bought for myself still bloomed bravely inside the door, but, other than a handful of intrepid adventurers who took a chance on getting a good bowl of chili (they got it, too!), Washington hardly gave me a nod.

BUT JUST LOOK NOW!

Today, 20 years later, things are different. Parchey's Restaurant is no Stork Club, it's true, but it's a pretty well-established Washington institution. It has outlived the WPA, the Blue Eagle, Imperial Japan, and the Third Reich.

Members of the "Parchey Steak Club" are all over America. Folks come to Washington from Seattle, Dubuque and Sault St. Marie, jump into cabs and ask to be taken to Parchey's . . . and then to the White House, the Pentagon and the Capitol (roughly, in that order of preference).

So that sometimes, nowadays, I marvel that I didn't have enough confidence in my future success to call my place "Mesirow's," but gave it my middle name of Parchey, instead!

AT LAST THE SECRET'S OUT!

This being my 20th business birthday, I'm going to anticipate the question that panting reporters will be pressing me to answer, by telling you, here and now, that the secret of Parchey's success has been steaks, steaks, steaks, steaks and more steaks!

Big steaks and little steaks. Thick steaks and thin steaks. Fat steaks and lean steaks. Sirloin steaks, cube steaks, chopped steaks, tenderloin steaks, T-bone steaks.

Round steaks and rump steaks; rare steaks and well-done steaks; juicy steaks, gravied steaks; mushroomed steaks and garlic steaks; fried steaks and broiled steaks; tender steaks and sometimes . . . during the war . . . chewey steaks!

Steaks! Steaks! Steaks! Steaks! Steaks! Steaks!

EVERYBODY LOVES 'EM!

You see, I love steaks myself, and I wasn't wrong when I figured that practically everybody else loves them, too. It doesn't make much difference whether you're from Washington, Alexandria or Humbolt, Arkansas . . . there's nothing quite as satisfying as a good luscious, melt-in-the-mouth beef steak.

So I advertised Steaks. Steaks by the dozen, by the score, by the hundreds, by the thousands and tens of thousands! And when people began to realize that Parchey's serves the kind of steaks they like best . . . we were on our way to success! It's that simple,

WHAT KIND OF STEAKS?

People have asked me: "Why don't you say something nice about your steaks? Why don't you say 'Succulent Filets Mignon' or 'Juicy Sirloin Steak'?"

The reason is that steak lovers are the most particular and prejudiced people in the world.

Suppose I advertised "Juicy Sirloin Steaks" and my ad was read by a man whose mother had taught him to love steaks by cooking them dry and hard as saddle-leather?

What if I advertised "Garlic Steaks" and it got into the hands of the Eskimo Delegate to the International Conference on Better Maternal Care for Unmarried Seals? It's a well-known fact that Eskimos never heard of garlic . . . and so this steak-lover would walk right past our doors without tasting our steaks!

YOUR KIND OF STEAKS

No, sir! this is a beef steak house. We specialize in Filets Mignon, Sirloin Steaks and Chopped Tenderloin Steaks.

We don't have veal steaks, ham steaks, lamb steaks or pork steaks; halibut steaks or swordfish steaks; no turtle steaks or venison steaks.

A SINCERE INVITATION

This week being my 20th anniversary in business wouldn't ordinarily be of much interest to you, regardless of how important a milestone it is for me.

But I'd like you to remember my business birthday, too.

So, for the past six weeks, I've been lining up the most succulent, tenderest, juiciest steaks I could find. I've shopped Chicago, Kansas City and Omaha. I've collected the most mouth-watering selection of Tenderloins and New York Sirloins, that man ever sank a hungry tooth into!

Melt-in-your-mouth steaks. Steaks aged to the point of perfection. Steaks that offer your knife no more resistance than a hunk of butter; steaks delicately larded with luscious fat; firm, plump, gristle-free steaks positively guaranteed to make you Ohh! and Ahh!

FREE? PERISH THE THOUGHT!

I'd like to be able to invite you to come in and enjoy one of these wonderful, wonderful steaks "on the house." Unfortunately, however, I'm a business man and not a philanthropist.

But I'll promise you this: you will not be charged Stork Club prices for the most delicious steak you've ever eaten; you won't be rushed or pushed; you'll only be pressed to relax and enjoy yourself; to take your own sweet time so that every single mouthful of your own favorite kind of steak . . . fixed exactly the way you like it best . . . will be a joy and a delight . . . a heart-warming, tongue-tingling gastronomical experience that you'll recall with pleasure and satisfaction as long as you remember!

So come on in this week, especially. It's my birthday, and I've got a present for your taste buds that your pocketbook won't resent!

Albert Parchey Mesirow

PLEASE NOTE: Bring your friends . . . we have plenty of comfortable seats and plenty of STEAKS for all!

Budget Bureau Studies Retirement Systems To Aid Federal Policy

A study of all the Federal retirement systems, both civilian and military, is under way at the Budget Bureau. Several private retirement experts have been retained to help on the survey.

This is a fact-finding study. No one person in Government is an expert on all of the various systems. But the facts gathered will have an important bearing on the attitude of the Administration toward bills in Congress to liberalize the retirement systems.

DOLLARS: During the past year the Secret Service transported more than 183 billion dollars in cash and securities through the streets of this city without the loss of a single penny.

ARMY: Karl Bendetson, the new Assistant Secretary, will be assigned direction over the Army budget, finance, and civilian personnel. The comptroller will report to him. Defense Secretary Johnson has told Congress that civilian comptrollers will be appointed in each of the three military agencies. Military people are being continued in those vital posts, he explained, merely because they are better than any civilians now available.

COSTLY: Several years ago an Army plane struck New York's Empire State Building. To settle damage claims, Uncle Sam already has paid out $662,239 and another $573,069 is outstanding in law suits.

ILLEGAL SPUDS: Potato smuggling has become big business. The Customs Service is out to break it up. Commissioner Frank Dow says his reports show that there is a "tremendous amount of potatoes" smuggled into Aroostook County, Maine, from Canada. The purpose—to get the generous Federal support price for potatoes. Dow will assign additional agents to the Maine border to crack down on violators.

REVENUE: Promotions in the Internal Revenue Bureau aren't based on the amount of taxes produced. Commissioner George Schoeneman gave members of Congress this assurance after several had complained that some Revenue agents were overzealous to bring in tax money in the hope of winning promotions. He explained that 600 of his best men were referred to a study of cases where little, if any, additional income taxes will be paid.

BARGAIN: The Treasury Department gets the biggest bargain in show business. To sell its War Bonds, it pays $55 each to such stars as Bob Hope and Bing Crosby for rehearsal time and the actual time it takes to transcribe 15-minute programs.

NOTES: Otto W. Schoenfelder has been appointed administrative officer of the Tax Court. He was formerly with the State Department . . . The Secret Service will send several agents to Europe to check up on counterfeiting of United States currencies there . . . the service is seeking funds to hire 31 new agents and 11 clerks, mainly to combat the upsurge in counterfeiting . . . The Interior Department last year turned over 165 million dollars to the Treasury. Its income is derived from sales ranging from hunting licenses and sealskins to public power and helium gas.

TOUGH: Defense Secretary Johnson is insisting that the military agencies buy standard equipment when it's possible to use it. He told a congressional committee that a contract recently had been awarded for cabinets at several times the price of standard cabinets which would have been used. He then added:

"We have cut this out to the extent we can. But we are going to get rough on the fellows who do not buy standard materials when they can be used. A couple of good firings will clear it up."

DEFENSE: The Office of the Defense Secretary would have several hundred additional employes here under its proposed 1951 budget. The office has about 1410 civilians and 553 military people assigned to it. It could build up to 1697 civilians and 671 military under the budget, or a net overall increase of 405. The Munitions Board and the Research and Development Board are under the Secretary's office.

Mother of 3 Identifies D. C. Laborer As Attacker

Man Is Charged With Rape Try Aboard Family's Cabin Cruiser Here

A man arrested Saturday night for tampering with a public telephone was charged yesterday with assaulting a 35-year-old mother aboard her cabin cruiser home last Thursday, police said.

The man, Joseph B. Vines, 40, a casual laborer, who police said lives at 435 N st. nw., was charged with assault with intent to commit rape after he had been identified by Mrs. Jeannie Williams, the victim, and three other persons.

Vines was arrested by park police after they said they saw him tampering with a public telephone on Columbia Island, near Memorial Bridge. The telephone is placed there for the convenience of picknickers.

Fitted Description

While they were questioning him at their headquarters, the police officers said they realized he fitted the description of Mrs. Williams' attacker—a Negro, aged 35 to 40; 5 feet 7 inches tall; about 195 pounds and with a short mustache.

The Metropolitan police sex squad was called in. Detectives took Vines to Metropolitan police headquarters and summoned Mrs. Williams and the other witnesses. The identifications followed, police said.

Mrs. Williams told police Thursday that a man came aboard her cruiser-home at the Gregory boatyard, 820 Maine ave. sw. He ordered her to disrobe, she said, and get into a bunk. When she scratched for a telephone, he took it from her and slugged her with a piece of pipe, she said.

Mother of Three

The mother of three children said she struggled, wrested the pipe away and hit him in the eye with it. She also bit him, she said, and he fled. She followed, screaming for help. A milkman chased the man but lost him.

Police said Vines admitted being on the boat and assaulting Mrs. Williams, but denied any attempt to rape her. Police said he admitted a conviction in North Carolina for attempted rape, and they said he was convicted here once for larceny.

Mrs. Williams was treated at Emergency Hospital following the attack. Only one child, 2½ years old, was on the boat at the time of the attack, police were told, the other two being in school, and Mrs. Williams' husband at work.

'Hero of Month'

Hyattsville Veteran Gets DAV Honor

A Hyattsville veteran who overcame the handicap of blinding, paralyzing war wounds to earn an executive job with an insurance company has been chosen "Hero of the Month" by the Disabled American Veterans.

O'Connell

Selection of William Patrick (Duke) O'Connell, 25, 6815 Riggs Manor dr., for the monthly award was announced yesterday by DAV in recognition of his determination to become self-sustaining despite the "serious handicaps" of war service.

O'Connell, a former sergeant with the 5th Ranger Battalion was riddled with machine-gun fire near Saarbrucken, Germany, when he moved behind enemy lines with an assault party seeking to capture a power plant. His wounds left him paralyzed and temporarily blind.

After receiving treatment in this country which restored his sight and enabled him to walk with the aid of a leg brace, O'Connell went to work for the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company nearly three years ago. With the aid of a GI course in insurance marketing at Purdue University, he improved his technique sufficiently to become district manager for the firm about a year ago.

Informed of his selection for the DAV award yesterday, O'Connell said he felt "highly honored," but laughed off the achievements which the DAV says earned him the honor.

"After all, I didn't do anything outstanding," he insisted. "I just got well."

GWU Law School Appoints Six New Faculty Members

Appointments of six new members of the George Washington University Law School, and addition of a new course in legal accounting for the term opening February 6, were announced yesterday.

Those appointed, with the courses they will teach, are: William L. Griffin, formerly of Willow Run, Mich., insurance and domestic relations; Maurice C. Kaplan, of the SEC, legal accounting; Thomas F. McGovern, Department of Justice, admiralty law; James J. Robinson, criminal law; William B. Harvey, partnerships, and Paul R. Conway, of the CAA, public utilities.

$20,000 Bond Set on Macris In Shooting

Ex-Florist's Victim, J. S. Karas, Reported In Serious Condition

The case against a former florist, who admitted to police shooting the owner of a shop he once owned Saturday night, was continued yesterday until February 8, with bond set at $20,000.

Peter Macris, 52, of 1607 17th st. nw., was arragned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence at noon, charged with assault with intent to kill.

Commissioner Lawrence continued the case pending developments in the condition of the victim, James S. Karas, 46, of 917 Emerson st. nw., who is at Emergency Hospital, in critical condition.

No Statement

Although Macris made no statement at the hearing, police testified he said he had "decided to end it all, and to take Karas with me."

Police said fast action by a passerby, Norman Dupre, 817 11th st. nw., who dashed in from the street, and took the gun away from Macris, prevented any possible suicide attempt.

Meanwhile, P. Michael Cook, attorney for Karas in an action brought by Macris in April, 1947, denied portions of Macris' statement to the police.

Cook said that Macris sued Karas in April, 1947, for $40,000, alleging that Karas was manager, kept the books and misrepresented the value of the business, upon its sale.

However, Cook said, Peter Coumatis was manager, signed all the checks and kept the books, and offered in court evidence which he said proved this. The case was dismissed in pretrial action in December, 1948, the attorney said.

A sister of Karas, Mrs. George Coppola, of 9404 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Spring, told The Post yesterday that Karas was shot despite a heroic attempt by Mrs. Karas to get between the gunman and her husband.

Police blamed a grudge over the business deal made five years ago for the shooting, which took place Saturday around 7:30 p. m. at the Annapolis Florist, 801 11th st. nw. Five shots were fired, one of which entered Karas' stomach, another which struck his left arm. Macris surrendered on the scene.

The school now has an enrollment of 587 children with 439 on the double-shift program.

Thirty units of the Ager Terrace apartment development, just down the road from the school, will open up about the first of the month. She said that the school averages a new student for every new unit.

In the offing though are schools in Mount Rainier and Langley Park that eventually will provide relief for the heavily overcrowded building.

Thomas S. Gwynn, jr., director of school planning, pointed out that while the schools are "economy" buildings they offer maximum in teaching aids.

Ceilings are of sound absorbent materials. Green colored, non-glare, chalk boards have replaced traditional blackboards. Tackboards for exhibits and cabinets for storage have been built into walls. Where possible a multipurpose room with facilities for recreation and the serving of hot lunches have been included in the plans.

Cinder block interior walls have been painted pastel shades of blue, yellow, green and rose. Fluorescent lights have been installed.

"We could spend a lot more money," said board member Ormond Phair. "With what we have, we have provided comfortable classrooms."

Get Progress Report

Board members received a progress report on two of their major projects—the new Albert S. Cook High School in Bladensburg and the new and as yet unnamed junior and senior high school for Negroes in Fairmont Heights.

The vocational unit of the Cook School already is in operation and board members toured the nine shops where 300 boys daily are trained in cabinet work, electricity, auto repairs, drafting, radio, hot metals, sheet metal, printing and machine work.

Construction is expected to get under way in the next month for the academic wing of the school that eventually will house nearly 1500 students.

When completed in September of 1951 it will free the present Bladensburg High School for use as a junior high school.

The combination junior and senior high in Fairmont Heights will be the county's major center of secondary education for Negroes. Twenty-three classrooms will be occupied next September. Work will continue on 11 additional classrooms, a gymnasium and cafeteria.

The school, built on the side of a hill on three levels, has rooms in units for the sciences, for shops and for the academic studies. The latter are grouped around a library.

Last to go up will be an auditorium. The county is building no auditoriums in any of its schools until all children have adequate classrooms.

No Principal's Office

Board members were told that the teachers have never been able to use their room or the principal his office. Both were converted to classroom use as soon as built.

Counting these two small rooms, the school has nine classrooms to house 141 elementary and 142 junior high school students. Three of the classrooms are in the basement.

To enter the new brick wing board members descended steep wooden steps from the old school.

Example of Problem

The District Heights Elementary School is an example of the problem the school board has in keeping pace with population growth.

Until a month ago when four new classrooms were occupied, students were on part-time and two classes met in the auditorium.

Principal Miss Leila Hardesty, showing board members through the school, said that 500 new apartments are under construction in the area and 250 will be occupied this spring.

She predicted that by September classes will be meeting once more in the auditorium and the school will be back on part time.

Mrs. Anna Bracken, principal of the Suitland Elementary School, said that the four-room brick addition to her school "came just in time."

She said it enabled her to cut down classroom size to 41 students a teacher. In a county where 35 students to a teacher is considered the maximum but 45 to 48 is more likely to be the rule, the Suitland school is considered to be in "good shape."

Wounded Housebreaker Sought by Police

Police checked hospitals yesterday for the escaped wounded intruder but found no suspects.

Prince Georges Double-Shift Classes to End

New School Openings In September to Cut Problem in County

Prince Georges County Negro schools will be completely off double-shift classes when schools open in September, barring unforeseen circumstances.

This was reported to members of the Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, Inc., which represents the P-T-A of 37 Negro schools in the county, at a meeting of the council Saturday in the Parent-Teachers Home, Upper Marlboro, Md.

Assistant Superintendent of Schools William S. Schmitt told the group that at the opening of Fairmount Heights Senior High School next fall, the present Lakeland High School wil become a junior high and elementary school. This will permit closing of one-room schools at Ammendale and Mirkirk and the Lakeland 3-room elementary school.

Seventh grade students at North Brentwood will go to Lakeland Junior High and the present Lincoln Junior High School at Buena Vista will be converted to an elementary school and its students sent to Lakeland. This will permit closing of the one-room school at Fletchertown, and the three-room school at Glenarden, said to be one of the worst schools in the county.

With the opening of the Fairmount Heights High, the present Highland Park Junior High will become an elementary school, which should relieve the double shift program at Fairmount Heights Elementary.

The 40 children attending Accokeek Elementary will be transferred to Sojourner Truth Junior High and Elementary at Oxon Hill.

The council also adopted a resolution urging the Board of Education to name the new Fairmount Heights High School for Doswell E. Brooks, who has served as supervisor of Negro schools since 1922. Brooks was present at the meeting yesterday.

Lawyer Hired to Fight Use of Transit Music

The Transit Riders' Association has hired Hector G. Spaulding, Washington attorney to fight the use of radios on streetcars and buses, the association announced yesterday.

Saulding, who is a professor emeritus of George Washington University law school, charged that transit radios are "exploitation by a transportation monopoly of its position to impose improper and undesired distractions totally unconnected with the business of transportation."

Era Ends

Final Service At Church Draws 1300

More than 1300 persons yesterday attended the final Sunday morning service in historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, H st. and New York ave. nw.

In a few weeks the building, erected in 1860, will be torn down to make way for a new $893,000 church with greatly expanded facilities.

At the service there were no eulogies for the old building where Lincoln once worshiped, and the change in status was referred to only briefly.

"Beginning Sunday," the bulletin said, "the regular morning and evening services of this church will be held in the Lisner Auditorium of George Washington University, at 21st and H sts. nw."

Details of parking facilities, seating arrangements, and new location of church offices in a building 1406 G st. nw., were also announced.

Practically all of the activities of the church will be continued during the period of about 15 months while a new church is under construction, the Rev. Robert T. Bridge, acting pastor, said.

On Tuesday at 8 p. m. there will be a final closing ceremony in the old church. At that time new officers will be installed, there will be infant baptism and new members will be received.

Mother Reports Takoma Park Boy, 15, Missing

Stanley

Stanley Warner Mann left his home at 34 Sycamore ave., Takoma Park, Md., presumably to go to Takoma Park Junior High School and hasn't been back.

His mother, Mrs. William McSparran said she and the boy were to talk to authorities in Rockville that afternoon about frequent absences from school.

The boy had told playmates he would like to go to Miami or Pittsburgh, his mother said. Police have broadcast an Eastern Seaboard lookout for him.

Mrs. McSparran described her son as 5-feet-11, 135 pounds, with brown hair and brown eyes.

Police Seek 2 in Holdups Of Taxicabs

Police searched yesterday for two bandits who robbed two cab drivers in separate holdups Saturday night. Loot totalled $26 in cash and one taxicab which had not been recovered more than 24 hours later.

Cabbie Alden Jackson, 2023 E st. nw., told police a passenger directed him to drive to the 600 block of Eastern ave. ne. There, he said, the passenger produced a gun, took $11, and fled.

Henry Gasque, 35, of 413 Newcomb st. se., said he picked up a passenger in the 800 block of Pennsylvania ave. se., for 3d and O sts. sw. In the 1400 block of Canal st. sw., he said, he was robbed of $15 and his cab. Police searched for the robber and cab.

Clous Green, 25, a laborer, of 416 15th st. se., reported to police Saturday night that at 15th st. and Kentucky ave. se., a pedestrian approached him and asked directions to New Jersey ave.

As he gave them, Green said, a large car drove up, a man alighted and joined the questioner. Then the two robbed him at gunpoint of $150, he said, jumped into the car, which was driven away by a third man.

2d 'Emancipation' Urged By Minister

A Washington Congregational minister yesterday called for a "second Emancipation proclamation" to free the District of segregation.

Speaking at First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., the Rev. Carl Heath Kopf said "the finest birthday present we could give our city on its 150th birthday this year, would be a second Emancipation Proclamation."

"The first, effective in 1865, freed the slaves from slavery. The second, if it could be effective in 1950, could free the descendents of these slaves from segregation and make them free indeed," he declared.

"It Should Happen Here"

Although abolition of segregation may be impossible throughout the entire South this year, "it should happen in the District of Columbia if we are to be a capital and not a county seat," he said.

Some progress toward the ideal of an unsegregated city has been made, Mr. Kopf said, urging "we ought to move with far more courage and understanding of the responsibility of Washington as a demonstration of democracy, rather than provincialism."

Mr. Popf said his sermon, entitled "Is Washington a Disgrace" was in answer to several recent magazine articles which stressed the short-comings of the District of Columbia.

In addition to segregation, the magazines "pointed an accusing finger and a sensitive camera" at widespread graft, disease-breeding slums, absence of the vote, increasing crime and alcoholism and inadequate hospital facilities, Mr. Kopf said.

The minister considered each charge separately. The only answer to graft, he said, is "dependable character that cannot be corrupted." In this area the church should be doing its best work "but it is so often preoccupied with liturgic and rubrics it forgets to cleanse the heart and renew a right spirit," he said.

Favors Home Rule

Some clean, low-rent housing is being built to relieve the slum problem, he said. Home rule, he declared, is needed "if we are to take responsibility for the character and the conduct of Washington."

"Only an aroused public conscience plus a hard-working, honest Police Department can help clean our city of the many gamblers who feed on gullible victims," he said in answer to the charge that increasing crime is one of the city's disgraces.

"There is nothing wrong with Washington that a solid dose of applied Christianity from top to bottom could not cure," he concluded. "This is God's city just as much as Jerusalem, and God will bless Washington if we make this city a fit vessel for His grace."

Sgt. Metzger Finishes His 2d Career

For most men one career is considered par. But when Sergt. Maximilian Metzger winds up a career, he begins looking for a job.

Sergt. Metzger

At 70 Sergt. Metzger is winding up his second career this week. When he's formally retired Tuesday as supervisor of the Congressional Record room of the Government Printing Office, he's "gonna look around for another job for 30 years."

Sergeant Metzger joined the GPO 22 years ago, just after retiring from 27 years of very active duty in the Marine Corps.

As a Marine the sergeant saw action in the Boxer Rebellion in China, in the Haiti uprising in 1914, at Vera Cruz the same year, and in the Dominican Republic in 1916. He also did three years in the Philippines.

"I was always very active," is the way Sergeant Metzger explains his disinclination to stop at two careers.

A native of Buffalo, N. Y., he and Mrs. Metzger live at the Cavalier Apartments, 3500 14th st. nw.

This afternoon Secretary Charles Sawyer will attend a reception for six retiring Commerce Department employes with a total of more than 200 years of service.

Grover C. Lambert, 1208 S st. nw., head of the Census Bureau mail room, with 33 years of service.

Mrs. Loret T. Hayden Dies; Wife of News Bureau Chief

Mrs. Loret Taylor Hayden, wife of Jay G. Hayden, chief of the Washington bureau of the Detroit News, died yesterday at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore.

Mrs. Hayden, daughter of the late Robert Love Taylor, former Governor and U. S. Senator from Tennessee, had been ill for about three months.

Although she took no part in political affairs her family said she vividly recalled the days when her father battled for the gorvernorship of the State and had as his opponent, his brother, her uncle, Alf Taylor.

During one campaign she remembered, the brothers, who traveled the campaign circuit together, wore red and white roses so their supporters could tell them apart.

Mrs. Hayden was born in Elizabeth City, Tenn., and attended Belmont College in Nashville. In 1926 she and Mr. Hayden were married and made their home at No. 1 Lenox st., Chevy Chase, Md.

She is survived by her husband, who has been a correspondent here for the Detroit News since 1915; a son by a former marriage, Campbell Pilcher, patent attorney, of Montclair, N. J.; a sister, Mrs. Hillsman M. Taylor, Memphis, Tenn., and a brother, David H. Taylor, Mountain Home, Tenn.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday at the Pumphrey Funeral Home, 7557 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, Md. Burial will be in Johnson City, Tenn.

"Please come soon, doctor!"

Even little Miss Make-Believe knows there is nothing wrong with her favorite doll that glue won't cure. But she knows, too, how quickly her parents turn to the telephone in emergencies, large and small.

The true worth of your telephone isn't only the errands it runs. Nor the time and steps and money it saves. Nor the friendships and family ties it helps to strengthen. In an emergency, one call may prove to be beyond price.

Whether you use it a lot or a little, your telephone is still a big bargain in protection, security and peace of mind.

Few things give you so MUCH for so little

Mrs. Forrest Sherman Counts on a New Gown When Admiral Returns

By Marie McNair

ADMIRAL FORREST SHERMAN, Chief of Naval Operations, left last night for Tokyo, promising Mrs. Sherman he'd bring back some brocades at least.

At the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sherrod yesterday afternoon in honor of the Admiral and his lady, Mrs. Sherman wore a rustling black taffeta frock with a tiny figure of burnished gold, made from material the Admiral had selected for her in Genoa last year. Mrs. Sherrod wore a black frock patterned in jet-beads.

There were a good many of the newspaper fraternity at yesterday's party, the group including the Marquis Childs, the Bert Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Elliston and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Foote.

I met the New Zealand Ambassador, Sir Carl Berendson, and Lady Berendsen on their way out, Lady Berendsen boasting in wifely fashion of the 10 pounds that the Ambassador has shed due to her watch-dog tactics and Sir Carl lamenting that he is now sipping only soft drinks.

Ham Was Special Treat

GEN. LAURIS NORSTAD was there. And tall, blonde Julie Ansberry was in the paneled library where the bar was set up, talking to Earl Stewart of New York. Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, Treasurer of the United States, found a comfortable chair in the corner. Mrs. Katharine Byron, in a cartwheel cerise hat, was sampling the real Smithfield ham which had been prepared by a special recipe and had been cooking in the Sherrods' home for a couple of days.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, back in town for a visit, had lunched earlier with Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Shears at the Sulgrave Club, and also in the group were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mr. Charles Wahl and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Warner.

A Pleasant Sunday Gathering

SUNDAY afternoon entertaining also included Miss Elizabeth Howry's very pleasant gathering at her house in Georgetown for friends of Mrs. George Eustis Corcoran, who arrived on Saturday from New York to be Miss Howry's guest for several days.

An annual visitor here where she once lived, Mrs. Corcoran's ties with Washington are deep rooted. The late Mr. Corcoran was the grandson of William Wilson Corcoran, founder of the Corcoran Gallery of Art. His father was George Eustis, but he took the name of his mother, Louise Morris Corcoran.

Elizabeth Howry, who is one of Washington's real cave-dwellers, has forsaken the town in favor of Jamestown, R. I. where she has a house with lots of ground. However, she proposes to come back every year to keep up with old friends and this winter has taken Mrs. Cleveland McCauley's little jewel of a place on Olive ave. until March 1.

Conversation Forms Groups

GATHERED in conversational groups were Mrs. Harold Walker; her sister, Baroness von Schoen, in bright scarlet jacket over a black skirt; Mrs. Mason Gulick, and Capt. and Mrs. Charles Hamilton Maddox, soon to take off for a long cruise around the South American coast.

Mrs. Effingham Townsend was fairly blooming after a Florida visit to her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gould Shaw, at Coconut Grove. Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, who's been missed around town, told me she's been away five times in as many months. But Mrs. McCeney Werlich couldn't tell anybody anything owing to an attack of laryngitis which came on suddenly yesterday morning.

The Roy St. Lewises were there, on their way to the Robert Montgomerys' party for Vice President and Mrs. Barkley. Others were Mme. Sze, wife of the former Chinese Minister; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis; Miss Janet Fish, who took her turn at the tea table; Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap in a gay green hat, and Mr. and Mrs. Eric Johnston.

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Erkin came in, and I also said "how-de-do's" to Mrs. Morris Cafritz; Mrs. Harry G. Meem and her daughter, Mrs. Floyd Rogers; Bertha Joseph; Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Shears; Mrs. Austin Kautz; Dr. Donald Honeywell, and Col. Frederick Jones-Davies.

Veep and Bride Honored Again

THE VICE PRESIDENT and his bride stepped out to another party in their honor yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Montgomery who've recently moved to the west wing of Friendship, home of the late Evalyn Walsh McLean, were hosts to "Mr. and Mrs. Veep."

Among their guests were the Vice President's sons-in-law and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Max Truit and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d. Also present were Undersecretary of Defense and Mrs. Stephen Early, Mr. and Mrs. James Vardaman, Adm. and Mrs. Clark Woodward, Deputy Undersecretary of State and Mrs. John Peurifoy, Senator and Mrs. Estes Kefauver, Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon, the Leslie Biffles, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rediker, Mr. and Mrs. George Allen and Senator and Mrs. Styles Bridges.

Then there were the Montgomery's neighbors, Mrs. Harold Walker and her son, Aldace, who occupy the center section of Friendship, and the Chauncey Carters who have taken the east wing of the house. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. James Helm, Mr. and Mrs. Roy St. Lewis, Representative and Mrs. Ken Regan, Mrs. George Holmes, Col. and Mrs. Alf Heiberg, and Mr. and Mrs. William P. Hurd of Greenwich, Conn.

Departing Counselor Feted at Party

HUGO GOUTHIER, who's to be transferred by his government from his post of counselor to the Brazilian Embassy, is being sped happily on his way by a series of farewell parties.

Yesterday Lucien Blaine Clark entertained at cocktails for the popular diplomat, and among the 50 or more guests were Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Mode, the Frank Redikers, Miss Exnicos, Miss Margret Thoss, Castello Branco, Miss Mary Louise Gore, Bob Lewis, Peter Crosby, Miss Anne Davis, Randy Rouse, Miss Katherine Henderson and Charles Camalier.

Mr. Clarke will have another party on Wednesday and on February 7 Randy Rouse will give a cocktail party for Mr. Gouthier.

GOP Box Supper Tickets Travel Far

TICKETS for the Republicans' Lincoln Day box supper are being purchased by people from all over the country, according to the ticket committee of the League of Republican Women which is cosponsoring the supper with the Republicans in Congress.

The supper will be held February 6 at Uline Arena to raise funds for party coffers, and will be televised and broadcast. George Murphy will arrive from Hollywood on January 30 to take charge of the entertainment, which will include top names, amateur bands, the Press Club Choir and other singing groups.

The arena will be arranged convention-style with banners for each State, so that everyone will be able to meet his Congressman and Senator.

Tickets may be purchased at league headquarters, 1604 20th st. nw.; at Lincoln Day headquarters, Room 1115 in the National Press Building, and the Waters Travel Agency, 1603 K st. nw.

Several members of committees working for the supper will be honor guests today at the weekly fashion show luncheon in the Mayower Lounge.

Among those expected to attend are Mrs. Owen Brewster; Mrs. Joseph Farrington; Mrs. A. Burke Summers, chairman of the women's committee for the supper; Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, chairman of hospitality for the event; Mrs. Howard A. Coffin, national committeewoman for the District of Columbia; Mrs. Carroll Kearns, president of the League of Republican Women, and Mrs. Davis Elkins.

YWCA Begins New Adult Class Series

Informal classes in adult education begin a new term at the YWCA this week. Registration is still open for day and evening classes, according to Mrs. Rebecca Slater, director of the school. Reservations may be made by phone at Metropolitan 2100, extension 29.

Advance registrations indicate that art, dressmaking, personality and investments for women are in top place, with bridge and adult speed reading coming in close behind. Business and interior decoration courses, public speaking and a personal appearance workshop are also nearly filled.

With few exceptions the courses are open to men and women, and include professional writing, English and foreign languages, public affairs and music. The YWCA school at 17th and K sts. nw., is one of the largest informal adult education centers in the country, and had over 2000 students enrolled in the fall term which has just ended. The faculty consists of 50 teachers.

Coming for Nuptial

The Archduke Franz Josef of Austria and the Archduchess, who are coming to Washington for the wedding of Mrs. Romaine Simpson to the Marquess of Milford Haven on February 4, will stay at the Hotel Raleigh.

Visiting Miami Beach

Mrs. Jesse I. Miller is at the Roney Plaza in Miami Beach for a stay of several weeks.

Spends Winter in Florida

Mrs. Sarah Levy is spending the winter in Tallahassee, Fla.

Tobé Says... Beige Is the Color For Your New Suit

The new crisply tailored suits that I discussed in my last column look even newer because they are smartest in light beige worsteds instead of the men's-wear grays that are traditionally synonymous with suits of this type.

Beige yarn-dyed flannel and beige covert are the two most popular beige suitings of the spring. But beige patterned worsteds, and particularly beige and white checks look very new and ultra-smart.

The chic accent for beige is crisp white birdseye pique or heavy white Irish linen blouses —and spanking white gloves.

Ask Anne About Used Christmas Cards

I noticed the address in your column of places where used Christmas cards may be sent. What should one do about signatures on the cards? Are they to be cut off or erased if possible, or are they acceptable as they are? M. E. P.

The cards are acceptable as they are. The people receiving them will take the pictures off or otherwise cut them to suit the purpose for which they will be used. However, if you prefer not sending cards along with the names of your friends still affixed thereon, it's all right to cut them off or erase them.

Have you a recipe for marrow dumplings, made with marrow scooped out of a soup bone, usually cooked with spare ribs? R. G.

Sorry, I haven't this recipe, but perhaps some other reader will be kind enough to supply it.

Can you furnish me a recipe for Potato Devil's Food Cake? R. G.

AUNT MARY'S CHOCOLATE POTATO CAKE

- 2½ cups sifted cake flour
- 4 teaspoons baking power
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon each cinnamon and cloves
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ teaspoon allspice
- ¾ cup shortening
- 2 cups sugar
- 3 squares bitter chocolate, melted
- 1 cup freshly mashed potatoes
- 2 eggs, separated
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- ¾ cup milk
- 1 cup chopped nuts, if desired

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, and spices. Cream shortening until soft, gradually add sugar, beating until light and fluffy. Add chocolate and then potatoes and beat until well mixed. Add well-beaten egg yolks and flavorings. Add flour alternately with milk, beating after each addition until light and fluffy. Add nuts, then fold in egg white beaten stiff but not dry. Turn into a prepared (8 by 10 by 3 inch) baking pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) 1 hour, or until done. Cool for five minutes. Turn out on rack. Frost with a butter frosting. This recipe makes one large cake.

Is there any store in Washington that handles Chinese teakwood furniture. We have some lovely hand-carved tables and chests to sell, but seem to have a hard time locating a buyer. As we expect to move in a few months, we would like to dispose of them as soon as possible. Another question: Is teakwood furniture considered an antique?

MRS. S. S. HADDAD,
803 S. Florida st.,
Arlington, Va.

Some of the Chinese shops in Washington sell teakwood articles, but I doubt they would provide a market for your things. The tables and chairs would not be considered antiques unless they are very old. (One hundred years is supposed to be enough to make a genuine "antique," though many people refer to articles of 50 or thereabouts as antiques.)

If you cannot sell them through advertising, you might try one of the auction houses (listed under "Auctioneers" in the yellow section of the telephone book) or a second-hand furniture store that sells on commission. You probably would not realize as much in this way, though, as you would through private sale of the articles.

We have a rug that generates electricity and, at our touch, gives off a slight shock. How can this be corrected? Could this be dangerous to children?

ANNE SCHLESINGER,
2517 Mozart pl. nw., Washington, 9, D. C.

Practically any wool carpet will do this in cold, dry weather if there is much friction between feet and rug. It isn't dangerous at all—the electricity generated isn't enough for that—but it can be annoying. There's not much you can do about it. However, since there isn't so much when there is moisture in the atmosphere, you might see that the air in your home doesn't get excessively dry from the heating system.

What is "file"? And how is that famous New Orleans dish, gombo file, made? T. N. N.

File is a powder made originally by the Choctaw Indians from young, tender sassafras leaves. It is typical of Louisiana and gives the g mbo (or gumbo) the slipperiness characteristic of the dish. This quality can also be achieved with okra when in season.

GOMBO FILE

- 1 4-pound stewing chicken
- 2 quarts water
- ½ pound ham, cubed
- 2 onions, chopped
- 1 pint oysters
- Salt, pepper cayenne
- ½ chili pepper, chopped fine (optional)
- 2 tablespoons file
- 2 cups cooked rice

Cut chicken in serving portions and simmer in salted water until tender. Remove bones and cut meat in cubes. Fry ham. Brown onions in ham fat. Combine chicken, ham, onions, and oyster liquor. Cover with boiling chicken stock. Add salt, pepper, cayenne, and chili pepper, and simmer for two hours. About 10 minutes before serving, add oysters. Just before serving, moisten file with a little of the soup and add to the rest of the soup. Do not cook after adding file. Place a mound of cooked rice in each soup plate and serve gumbo over it. This recipe serves eight.

Wise Mothers FIND NEW RELIEF!

For STUFFINESS, COUGHS of COLDS

Wise mothers know how really effective Vicks VapoRub is when you rub it on.

Now, for amazing new relief when colds cause coughing, upper bronchial congestion, or that "stuffed-up" feeling, modern mothers use VapoRub this special way, too — in steam! It brings relief almost instantly.

Put 1 or 2 good spoonfuls of VapoRub in a vaporizer or bowl of boiling water, as directed in package. Then . . . breathe in soothing, medicated vapors.

Keep in Trim

In No Shape To Exercise? Just Stretch!

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOUR muscles are scarcely up to holding the figure upright, a bit of tone in the brace of girdle muscles will work wonders. But, oh dear . . . you are in no shape to exercise . . . and the whole idea leaves you less than lukewarm. In that case, just stretch out on the floor and relax.

The most restful position is with knees bent, soles of feet flat on the floor—my, that feels good, right at the small of the back. Pull the small of the back flat against the floor, and it feels even better.

A good, big stretch would help, so just stretch right leg straight down and right arm up and pull gently along that right side . . . make it a smooth, long stretch. Release the stretch slowly . . . easing out releases all tension. You might like to stretch again . . . stretching is wonderful, for it brings the most relaxed feeling and all for no effort. Then stretch along the left side, lazily.

Yawning Helps Too

NOW yawn and cross one leg over the other and stretch on the bias . . . that feels so slimming. Stretch again for good measure. Swing the opposite leg across and s-t-r-e-t-c-h all those lateral muscles. Relax.

The easier stretching is, the better. Try this one . . . just lying stretched out to full extension, taking it very easy, move the right leg away from the left, sliding the heel along on floor and moving as far out to the side as comfortable. Try that again, this time placing hand flat on the side-front of the abdomen . . . then slowly move the leg out toward the side, holding that nice, snug, up-and-in pull. Move the other leg out toward the side.

Stretching is a natural. The smooth muscle pull gently stimulates the circulation and brings you back to life.

Paris Pledges Shorter Skirts

By Sally Swing

United Press Staff Correspondent

Paris, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Sleeveless dresses and shorter skirts will be the most important trends when Paris designers begin their Spring fashion shows this week.

Buyers in record numbers from the United States, Latin America and Europe have been crowding into Paris for weeks, fighting for hotel reservations and front row seats in the designers' salons.

The main question for 1950 is: "Will it be the '20s or the '50s?"

Christian Dior, creator of the "new look," said milady will not be wearing dresses copied after the 1920s as far as he is concerned.

"My collection will be feminine and free-moving," said he. "It will be inspired by the mid-century, not by the past."

Balmain, who rented a spacious room in the swank Georges V Hotel, promised skirts 14½ inches from the floor. He said they would be straight but free-flowing—with "room to sit down in."

"Women are going to have to learn to walk again, too, because my collection will feature revealing and free-flowing lines," Balmain added.

He said it was no secret the fashions of the 1920s appealed to him.

"The days of Chanel and Paul Poiret were very exciting," he said. "My fashions this Spring will not be grotesque, however; tops will be loose, with many dresses sleeveless."

But most Paris designers keep their plans as secret as the hydrogen bomb.

Typical hush-hush was the hairstyle of Dior's mannequins, all of whom had long locks today. The idea is long hair can be lopped off at the last moment. So no one will know until D-hour (dress-hour) whether Dior likes long or short hair.

JAYNE'S P-W tablets KILL PIN-WORMS
(You may have them and not know it)

Fidgeting, nose-picking and a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms . . . ugly parasites that medical experts say infest one out of every three persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, these pests must not only be killed, but killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do . . . and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly and easily.

Don't take chances with this dangerous, highly contagious condition. At the first sign of Pin-Worms, ask your druggist for genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge . . . the small, easy-to-take tablets perfected by famous Dr. D. Jayne & Son, specialists in worm remedies for over 100 years.

Alaska Seen Easy Victim Of Red Attack

By The Associated Press

Alaska could be captured tomorrow by one or two Russian parachute divisions coming across Bering Strait, in the opinion of Gov. Ernest Gruening of Alaska.

From those Alaskan bases, once captured, any part of the United States would be vulnerable to air attack, Gruening told a House Appropriation Subcommittee hearing.

This committee's report, released last night, shows he told the members that the total United States military force in that strategically important northern outpost is 7500 men.

This, Gruening described as "next to nothing."

He recalled that during the last war the Japs got and kept a toehold for a year in the Aleutian Islands. He maintained that once the Russians occupied Alaska, it would be very difficult to get them out.

He said it was hard for people in Alaska to understand why Congress would appropriate a total of seven billion dollars in economic and military aid to halt communism in Europe yet give but 96 million dollars for Alaska.

He said Alaska has asked, as an "absolute minimum," 137 million dollars which would not make that territory impregnable, but merely would start a construction of a radar screen and house a limited number of troops.

Death From Fall Off Running Board Ruled Accidental

The Montgomery County medical examiner issued a certificate of accidental death yesterday for Bailey P. Dudderar, 34, Sykesville, Md., who was killed Saturday when he fell from a moving truck.

Police said Dudderar was hitchhiking on Route 97 near Brookeville about 5 p. m. A friend, Frank R. Pickett, 35, of Olney, picked him up but he had to ride on the running board of the truck because the cab was full.

Hedied at Montgomery County General Hospital of a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Oystermen In Maryland Start Co-op

Smith Island, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—A group of Smith Island watermen has launched an oyster farming cooperative, something new in Maryland's seafood industry.

Chairman David H. Wallace of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission commented today that "this is the first concerted effort by any group of Maryland watermen to go into oyster farming for themselves."

Under present law, only barren bottoms may be leased, and by individuals only. Thirty Smith Islanders applied individually for authority to lease oyster beds and plant some bivales privately.

But the movement apparently had a broader basis. Wallace said he understood that about 150 Smith Island watermen—the large majority on the island—are members of the Coop and will participate in its program.

The 30 asked the commission for 25 acres each, making a total of 750 in Tangier Sound and Twitch's Cove, a tributary of Tangier into Smith Island.

Attorney Prentiss Hall of Crisfield, representing the new organization, said chief problem for its founders is the question of financing seed oyster supplies.

The State last year planted 375,000 bushels of seed in its own propagation program. It sold 10 percent to private planters. Basic price is 20 cents a bushel.

State fisheries men have long advocated some such action to help strengthen Maryland's oyster industry, ailing especially in Chesapeake Bay.

Hoodlum's Haul: Educational Book Of Police Rules

Three hoodlums yesterday probably were ruefully surveying the results of their Saturday night's haul on a policeman—a copy of police regulations.

Pvt. Sidney F. Betts, 51, a Capitol policeman who lives at 313 New Jersey ave. nw., reported that was the best his attackers could find after working him over, although he had $4 in one pocket.

Betts said he was struck from behind at 1st and C sts. se. He was off duty and out of uniform.

Traffic Officer, Struck By Car, in Fair Shape

Pvt. Willie M. Pritt, 25, of the Ninth Precinct was in fair condition at Casualty Hospital last night after being struck Saturday by an auto while directing traffic at Florida ave. and H st. ne.

Police identified the driver as Samuel Milewsky, 36, of 312 11th st. se. He said he was not aware his car struck Pritt.

SHEER ENCHANTMENT
BUILT FOR SNOW WHITE BY THE SEVEN DWARFS. Fairy tales being true, you would readily admit they played a part in the glorious charm and enchantment this lovely home portrays; "Doc" did the construction work of attractive stone and frame; "Bashful" was busy painting the outside; "Grumpy" was busy making the basement while "Sneezy" "Dopey" and "Sleepy" were resting on rear stone patio beneath shade trees. "Happy" with the help of all fairyland was working overtime decorating the spacious studio living room, balcony bedroom or den-dining room, equipped kitchen, 2 bedrooms and bath. All whistling while they worked, this majestic was produced at a realistic price of $15,900.

3 Southern Groups Unite Into One Klan

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—The Ku Klux Klan today became all one big happy family—almost.

Leaders of three Klan groups formed one united body. And the new Klan immediately declared war on what it termed "hate movements."

Spokesmen said the action taken here yesterday and today brought together as one Ku Klux Klan the Federated Klans of Alabama, the Southern Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and the Association of Carolina Klans.

The only one still outside is Samuel Roper's Klavern in Atlanta.

Three front men—the only ones whose names will be publicly associated with the Klan—are listed as Hugh Morris of Birmingham, Thomas L. Hamilton of Leesville, S. C., and Bill Hendrix of Tallahassee, Fla.

In a statement, the newly united Klan called for militant action against such groups as the Federal Council of Churches of Christ of America, B'nai B'rith and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

While the Roman Catholic Church is sincerely fighting communism, Klan leaders said, its "clerical heirarchy" is totalitarian in its views and "must not be permitted to dominate and control the fight against communism."

Another target singled out by the Klan is progressive education, termed "nothing more than a Communist movement, sometimes called Socialist, to use the schools and colleges to overthrow the American way of life and our Constitution."

On the other hand, the Klan, is tolerant, its leaders said. It supports free enterprise and the Constitution.

UAW Seeks Relief From 'Propaganda'

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

It's not only the commuters—like those using Washington's Capital Transit System of New York's Grand Cenrtal Station—who are hot and bothered about "forced listening" and the "captive audience."

The unions, too, are getting up in arms over the issue. The union's concern, however, is not with the "captive audiences" of streetcars or railroad terminals, but with the employes "captive" in an industrial plant.

The CIO United Auto Workers has taken the lead in a union campaign to halt what the union describes as "gas chamber" propaganda lectures, by which "captive" factory workers are bombarded with lectures—at regular hourly wages and even at time and a half—attacking the Fair Deal.

The latest issue of the ULAW newspaper charges that several industrial companies have been "compelling" workers to attend in-plant meetings "where hired spielers pour out their propaganda to audiences who cannot get away and who cannot raise questions or answer back."

The Auto Workers' publication charges editorially:

"The technique itself and the propaganda content are not the only menace in this new campaign. The people and organization behind it are as great a threat to democracy as the devices they use.

"The overlords of American industry have turned over the execution of this campaign to arch-reactionary individuals and organizations who have some of the trappings and some of the odor of native American fascism."

Woman Has 3d Degree Burns in Home Fire

Mrs. Simmie Lee Lewis, 38, suffered third degree burns over most of her upper body in a fire yesterday at her home, 2135 Newport pl. nw.

Battalion Chief Clarence Quick said the fire apparently started in a mattress on the ground floor of the two-story brick row house. The fire was confined to bedding and a few pieces of furniture, Quick said.

Mrs. Lewis was admitted to Emergency Hospital in undermined condition.

Lanphier Talk Planned

Thomas G. Lanphier, wartime lieutenant colonel in the Air Force, who flew around the world in 4½ days last month, will describe the experience at a luncheon meeting of the Alexandria Rotary Club, to be held at 12:30 p. m. Tuesday at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. Lanphier is a director of the Air Force Association.

'This I Remember'

Roosevelt Urged War Trip to Pacific for First Lady

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

THAT April, when John Boettiger went into the Army, our daughter Anna and her son Johnny came for a visit. John had served in World War I and was overage for the draft, but because all our sons were in the service he felt that he too should go. Also, he feared that if he stayed out my husband might think he was not doing his share. I was never quite sure that this reasoning was sound, though I understood his feeling. Nevertheless it seemed to me that this was a war for which young men were far better suited and that perhaps older men who had established themselves in some occupation were of greater service at home doing their jobs well. But I knew only too well how men could feel, and I respected John's decision.

Like every family in the country we watched eagerly for mail from the boys. Our sons in the Navy came into port occasionally and we had a glimpse of them now and then, but we seldom saw Elliott.

I imagine every mother felt as I did when I said goodbye to the children during the war. I had a feeling that I might be saying goodbye for the last time. It was a sort of precursor of what it would be like if your children were killed and never came back. Life had to go on and you had to do what was required of you, but something inside of you quietly died. I began to look with wonder at all the women in the country who must be feeling this same way, and came to admire their courage. Fathers had the same kind of courage, but there was an easier acceptance on their part of the need for war. Men do not instinctively revolt against war as women do.

At the time of World War I, I felt keenly that I wanted to do everything possible to prevent future wars, but I never felt it in the same way that I did during World War II. Then I identified myself with all the other women who were going through the same slow death, and I prayed that I might be able to prevent a repetition of this stupid atrocity called war.

I have tried to keep the promise I made to myself, but the progress that the world is making toward peace seems like the crawling of a little child, very halting and slow. However, that should make us redouble our efforts, if only we can keep the strength and faith to do so.

Son's Ship Bombed

IN July I was called on the telephone early one morning and very guardedly told that there had been an engagement in which Franklin, jr.'s ship had been bombed. They thought it was getting into Palermo safely. That was all. I went to my husband's room and asked him if he knew anything more than I had heard. He said he had just been told the same thing but he would try during the day to find out about it. It was some time before I heard the details. 'After the ship had been bombed it was taken into Palermo, where it continued to be shelled at intervals. It was tied to another ship, and men were injured on both of them. Franklin, jr., had the good luck to be able to save one boy's life by carrying him down to the other ship's doctor. At the time he did not notice that he himself was hit in the shoulder, but to this day little pieces of shrapel are there to remind him of it.

Eventually Franklin, jr.'s ship went to Malta for repairs and was still at Malta when he got word that he was to meet his father, who was on his way to Cairo. He was delighted at the prospect of seeing his father, but when they met Franklin told him he would like him along on the trip as his aide. Young Franklin's joy immediately changed to determination that nothing of the kind should happen. After the repairs on his ship were completed it would have to get home, and he knew it would be an anxious trip because the ship would not really be in topnotch seaworthy condition. He felt that after all he and his shipmates had been through together he could not let the ship go back without him.

Franklin, jr., and his father had quite an argument about where his first duty lay—whether his ship or his father's need of his help in traveling presented the greater duty. The ship won in the end, and his father gave him a letter of orders to return to it. Young Franklin realized that he could never show those orders to anyone, because security demanded that no one know his father was in the area. He had a very amusing and difficult time getting back to Malta without orders that could be shown to get priority.

I do not remember when my husband first suggested I take a goodwill trip to the Pacific, though I do remember why he thought such a trip necessary. Because Australia and New Zealand were so far away he suspected that they had been rather neglected in the matter of visitors.

Set for Guadalcanal

I AT ONCE pleaded to be allowed to see our men on Guadalcanal and other islands. I had paid many a visit to the West Coast hospitals where the early wounded from Guadalcanal and some from the 1st Marine Raider group (with which Jimmy served) were being returned. I told my husband frankly that it would be hard for me to continue the visits if when I was to be in the Pacific area anyway I were not permitted to go to the places where these men had left their health or acquired permanent handicaps. Franklin finally broke down and gave me letters to the commanding generals and to Admiral Halsey saying that he was willing to have me go to Guadalcanal "if it did not interfere with the conduct of the war."

I have since learned from Col. William Roy Hodgson, who later served with me in the United Nations but who at the time was making the arrangements for my visit, that Franklin told the Australian prime minister and Admiral Halsey that no matter what he wrote or what he said I was not allowed to go to Guadalcanal because he thought it was too dangerous. However, he did not have the courage to tell me, knowing quite well that I would refuse to make the trip at all under those restrictions.

What these gentlemen must have thought about the two conflicting messages they received I do not know.

Franklin was going to the conference in Quebec on the seventeenth, the same day I was to take off for San Francisco, but we had a little time together first at Hyde Park. It was decided that my trip should be kept secret, so I went on about my daily business as usual.

Prime Minister Churchill, who was staying with us, still speaks occasionally of how surprised he was when I casually mentioned at dinner one night that I was leaving the next day for the Southwest Pacific. He looked aghast and asked: "What have you done about your trip?" I said all the plans had been made and the itinerary worked out. He asked who was going with me, and I said no one. Since I had been subjected to much criticism on my return from Great Britain, I thought that this time I would avoid similar attacks by taking up as little room as possible on the military plane I was assigned to. I found to my regret that some columnists couldn't have been more disagreeable had I taken several people.

Mr. Churchill insisted on cabling to all his people in the Pacific, and they were most kind wherever I met them.

Franklin felt that since I was traveling on a military plane I should not take any money which accrued from my column while I was on this trip. So I arranged for half of my earnings to go to the Red Cross and half to the American Friends Service Committee, also dividing between them what I earned for articles written after my return.

I flew to San Francisco on a commercial plane, at my own expense, and spent a day there before taking off for Hawaii.

Tetanus Shots

WHEN I left San Francisco I knew that somewhere along the line I should have to have another shot for tetanus. I had undergone the other shots with such ease that I walked into the Naval Hospital on Bora Bora without a qualm. Shortly after I took the shot, however, my arm began to swell, and for several days I was actually uncomfortable. Nothing could be done about it, and I tried to forget it as much as possible, because my schedule was all made out and it was necessary for me to keep moving according to plan.

That plan took me, before I was through, to 17 islands. I also visited the capital of New Zealand and a number of cities on the east coast as well as many camps and hospitals in the northern part of Australia.

When I reached Noumea I presented to Admiral Halsey my letters from my husband. The admiral has told his own story of how much he dreaded my coming. He did not dread it any more than I did, but I determined to do as well as I could and, if possible, get up to Guadalcanal. The admiral refused to give me the slightest inkling of what he had decided about that and told me in no uncertain terms that I would have to go to New Zealand and Australia first and that he would make his decision on my return.

I thought I noticed a slight change in his attitude before I left; perhaps some good reports were coming to him from the hospitals and the various places I had already visited. In any case he sent with me to New Zealand one of his young aides and Coletta Ryan, the head Red Cross worker who was in charge of the clubs in that area.

It was in Australia, in a Red Cross club, that I had an interesting talk with some young men. They were mostly Air Force boys, some of them from West Virginia, and the discussion turned to John L. Lewis and the coal strike. I told them of a boy in a hospital who had looked at me, ill as he was, and said: "I come from West Virginia. I'm a miner. It isn't the miners who are wrong. They've got real grievances, and they don't understand about us soldiers. You know that."

Not Even Lewis' Fault

SINCE I understood the boys' feeling that no one at home should be on strike I was glad I knew mining areas well enough to realize it was not even entirely John L. Lewis' fault. It was the fault of all of us who should have paid attention long ago to the conditions under which the miners worked, instead of leaving it to John L. Lewis to get benefits for them. But the boys who had been miners themselves, or whose fathers were miners, had a difficult time trying to explain to their companions that there was any justification for a coal strike in wartime.

I was always a little sorry when the boys were called together and had to stand in the sun while I made a short speech. I knew how they hated it. The chance conversations in a Red Cross room, or in a mess hall or in a hospital, I always hoped had some interest for them, and I carried away an endless number of names of mothers, wives, sweethearts and sisters to whom to send messages when I got home.

The story has been told—and it is true—of how I telephoned one girl in Washington and told her who I was and that I had a message from her fiance. She said: "Don't be funny. Who do you think you're fooling?" She refused to believe my call was genuine until I sent her a little note of explanation.

Will the Russians Think We're Revolting?

Hal Feyling of 8910 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md., wonders what Stalin's spies must think when our juke boxes and radios give out with: "Save your Confederate money, boys, the South will rise again."

WONDER WHO WRITES HIS AD LIBS?

Like most city rooms, ours is equipped with a little box that brings in police calls, to which the "desk" listens attentively.

However, to the rest of the hired hands, the police radio is just one more occupational noise that blends into the background of office routine. After a while, you don't even hear it.

But the other night, with everybody working against a deadline just before edition time, something went wrong.

Instead of the usual monotone of the dispatcher's voice, the little box started broadcasting the screaming siren of a scout car in hot pursuit of a culprit.

A hush spread through the tense city room as ears perked up and typewriters stopped their clatter. The siren's wail rose and fell—then faded away completely.

As we sat in silent mystification, the sonorous voice of a reporter broke the spell with the dramatic announcement: "Gangbusters!"

MORNING AFTER

When the party was hearty
And liquid and late
And some seventy devils
Are pounding your pate
Then the girl who is truly
An ideal life mate
Is the wife who believes that
It's something you ate.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Six-month-old Chesapeake retriever; very healthy, loves children." (Randolph 8086.)

FLEUR'S FLAIR

I'm the kind of fellow magazine publishers love. I buy the first issue of practically everything that hits the newsstands, just to make sure that I don't miss a new title before it goes out of business.

Currently, I have just finished reading a new thing called Flair, which seems destined to be a great success.

Flair's editor, Fleur Cowles, says her new magazine: "combines for the first time under one set of covers the best in the arts, literature, fashion, humor, decoration, travel and entertainment."

The editor's accuracy in making these statements seems to be matched only by her modesty. Nevertheless, there is probably enough snob appeal in Flair to win it a permanent place in the publishing field.

After I make my first million, I think I'll bring out a new magazine, too.

It will be designed to appeal to the poverty-stricken masses who are still working on their first Cadillac, seldom get a chance to vacation on the Riviera, and sometimes go for a week or more without donning formal attire.

The pages of this revolutionary magazine will be uniform in size and texture, with no windows, no inserts, and no accordion fold-outs.

There will be a number on every page, and these numbers will run in consecutive order. The table of contents will be on Page One, where people can find it.

And, most shocking of all, the March issue will appear in March, and not in January.

Be sure to buy the first issue of my magazine; in all probability, there will never be a second.

PUN FUN

"Please use your influence on Ed Dodd," writes Richard Raymond of 1011 Crawford dr., Rockville, Md.

"Tell him to quit stalling and get Goober in those field trials. That dog doesn't have rabies. We all know he's a bird dog, not a rabid hound."

CYNIC

ADD DEFINITIONS

Bernice M. Willey of Worrel ave., Lanham, Md., counters my definition of "conscience" with this one, that she heard on the radio: "Your conscience is the part of you that hurts while the rest of you feels good."

SOME COMBINATION

Laura Cordua of 952 Nichols dr., Laurel, Md., is reminded of those traveling salesman jokes by the "double selection" offered by the Book-of-the-Month Club. The titles are:

"Father of the Bride" and "Death of a Salesman."

Five T-Men Involved in Shakedowns

By Drew Pearson

Probably 99 per cent of the Treasury Department's vast army of hard-working, underpaid revenue agents are honest. However, political fixers of tax frauds arranged by certain of the big boys in Washington have had repercussions in the lower ranks.

Pearson

A few agents have figured that since the big boys at the top were getting theirs, the little fellows at the bottom might as well get some, too. One result has been an outbreak of bribery in New York City, where one T-man has been indicted and four others suspended. However, despite the fact that the suspensions took place six months ago, the case appears to have been put on ice.

In New York's third internal revenue collection district in February, 1948, an informer's letter was received stating that Kenmoor, Inc., cloak and suit manufacturers at 512 7th ave., New York, had made unreported income on the black market. William Ganey, division chief of the Special Investigating Unit, turned the letter over to T-Man James A. Bessell, explaining that the "squeal letter" actually had been written by another T-Man, Thomas Cannon, who was acquainted with the Kenmoor company and felt they would be an "easy touch."

Bessell then called on Rosenthal and Montello, partners in the Kenmoor company, examined their books and said he found unreported profits on his second trip to Kenmoor, Inc. However, he was told by William Ladenheim, an accountant, that the investigation would cost his clients a great deal of extra time and inconvenience. Later in the same day, Cannon, the T-Man who had written the "squeal letter," brought in an envelope containing $3000 in cash.

According to a sworn affidavit in the hands of this column, Ganey, chief of the investigating unit, split the $3000 four ways—$900 going to Bessell, $900 to Ganey, $900 to Cannon and $300 going to a man whom Ganey described as "George."

Rosenthal and Montello, when interviewed by this column, stated that Cannon had offered to fix the case and that $3000 was agreed upon as the price. This was placed in an envelope and turned over to Cannon by Rosenthal. The partners said they had not been guilty of tax evasion, but were the victims of a shakedown.

Almost simultaneously with the Kenmoor shakedown, John Galgano, another investigating agent, uncovered a $300 check paid under-the-table to the Sherman Chevrolet Co., Inc., 561 Central Park ave., Yonkers, N. Y., as a bonus on the purchase of a new car.

Two T-Men, Galgano and Bessell, then called on Jack Ingraham and Morris Sherman, partners in the auto firm.

No further investigation was made, but according to a sworn affidavit in the hands of this column, Harry Brickman, assistant borough works commissioner for Manhattan, arranged to have the whole matter ended.

Thereupon $4000 was paid to Bessell by Sherman's brother-in-law and this amount was handed to Chief Ganey. He kept $1200 for himself, gave $1200 to Galgano, gave another $1200 to Bessell and kept the remaining $400 for "George."

Last summer the Treasury indicted Bessell, and suspended Ganey, Cannon, Galgano, and Fiscella. However, no action has been taken since then, and when their chief, James W. Johnson, Collector of Internal Revenue for the third district, was interviewed, he refused to comment on who might be protecting them and why no further action had been taken.

THOMAS HAIR TREATMENT

SAYS HENRY BRANDON
ORCHESTRA LEADER
Now at The Mayflower Hotel
"A Thomas expert obviously knows how to remove dandruff flakes and how to relieve the itch which they cause. He doesn't beat around the bush (no pun intended)—he tells you straightforwardly just what Thomas treatment will do for you and what it won't do. You know before you start just what to expect," says Henry Brandon.
Well, we do try hard, Mr. Brandon. And we have the advantage of a background of 24 years of successful experience. When we think we can be helpful, we say so. But when we think that Thomas treatment won't do what a person wants done, we are equally frank. We sincerely feel that this professional integrity has formed a sound backbone for our success structure. We'll advise you frankly, too—without charge or obligation. Come in today and find out for yourself just what Thomas treatment is, and what it can do to help solve your hair problems.
